NOON BOOM

An electronically fired cannon that will boom at noon every day is to be set up outside the Laurel Point hotel as part of the Captain Cook Bicentennial festivities.

Ald. Bill Tindall said today Victoria council accepted the offer of a cannon, made by Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., but only after making sure the noise won'tdisturb residents in the area.

Tindall said the city has been assured that with the cannon pointed north, the sound will travel out across the harbor and won't bother people living in the Laurel Point area.

He said the cannon will stay in service after this year's Captain Cook celebrations, becoming a permanent Victoria fixture.

Smith Near Pact

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Black and white Rhodesian leaders today announced they had reached agreement in principle on the major points of a constitutional settlement and were within days of setting up a transitional government designed to lead the country to black majority rule.

Premier Ian Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Chief Jeremiah Chirau and Elliott Gabellah, who was representing Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, told reporters after the 37th round of the so-called internal settlement talks that they had solved their differences over the key issue of white representation in a Zimbabwe parliament.

All four walked together, smiling and chatting, out of a red-brick suburban mansion where the talks have been taking place to give the news to reporters.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the state department said the agreement appeared unacceptable to the United States because it was made without the participation of the guerrilla group.

U.S. Coal Strike Talks Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks in the 72-day U.S. coal strike will begin at the White House tonight after industry officials at first refused, then accepted President Carter's call to reconvene the negotiations.

The industry's acceptance came hours after company negotiators had rejected Carter's request, made Tuesday. The president also held out the threat of stronger measures to end the strike.

A statement by the Bituminous Coal Operators Association (BCOA) said the decision to attend the White House negotiations was made after the industry was assured of "appropriate conditions" for the resumptions of talks.

Woman Attacked In Drugs Demand

A woman night attendant at a home for the mentally handicapped was attacked and threatened early today by two men in ski masks who demanded money and drugs.

The intruders fled after holding Mrs. Donalda Mills for three quarters of an hour at the Springwood group home, off Mt. Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck and kicked but not seriously injured and returned to complete her shift after a checkup at hospital.

A cashbox containing $15 was stolen after drawers and cupboards were ransacked without disclosing any drugs other than household medication.

Saanich police and North Saanich RCMP set up roadblocks shortly after the woman reported the robbery at 12:15 a.m. but no suspects were found.

Ralph Vipond, administrator of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, which operates the home, said the incident took place without arousing any of the 22 adult residents.

"She (Mrs. Mills) talked them down," he said.

But when the men discovered the box contained only $15 they threw her down and kicked her.

Mrs. Mills, a program worker at the home, said the men were young and not too abusive.

"There could have been a lot of damage done at that place. They were very considerate in that fashion," she said today.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck in the face and kicked. The attack left her bruised and bleeding with one eye puffed up and an injury to a wrist and hand.

The residence consists of a main building containing bedrooms, activity area and office. A separate building houses the kitchen and Vipond said it was while the attendant was walking between the two structures that she was seized.

The doors would have been locked had she been inside, he said.

He said the society is considering a burglar alarm system and employing a second person for overnight surveillance.

Vipond said police make one nightly check of the premises.

HUNGRY ELK 'WON'T STARVE'

A spokesman for British Columbia's recreation and conservation ministry gave his guarantee today that hundreds of hungry elk in the East Kootenay area won't starve to death because of a lack of hay.

"Those elk are being fed and they'll continue to be fed," said Walter Donald, assistant to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

Donald said in an interview he didn't known how the fish and wildlife branch would be given the additional funds it needs to carry out its feeding of the elk, but the government would find a way to maintain the program.

Donald made the announcement after Carmen Purdy, president of the East Kootenay Wildlife Association, complained that the elk were starving to death and threatened to dump the first dead elk on the steps of the legislature to bring attention to the problem.

Military Colleges Admit Women

Women are to be admitted to Canada's three military colleges.

Defence Minister Barney Danson announced the plan Tuesday and said the first step will be to appoint women to the advisory board of Royal Roads Military College here in Victoria, the Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont., and St. Jean College de Militaire in St. Jean, Que.

Col. J.H. Roddick, commandant of Royal Roads, said the addition of women will not pose any serious problems.

He said when U.S. military academies first admitted women they tried to segregate them by placing them in separate wings of dormitories. This has since been changed, he said, and women now have their own rooms and washrooms scattered throughout the various dormitories.

"The pysical fitness program might have to be adjusted. There may have to be some acceptable alternatives," he said.

Rear-Admiral R.W. Murdoch (Rtd.) is regional chairman of the Royal Roads sub-committee on the advisory board.

Murdoch said the minister indicated he will appoint women to the board quickly.

"The move is in tune with the times. He (the minister) will be looking for well-qualified women in the academic and professional fields."

Murdoch said the United States has had women in its military academies for the past two years.

Canadian women officers to date have received academic training in civilian colleges through the Regular Officers Training Program.

While more and more job categories are being made available to women in the armed forces they are not eligible to serve in a combat role.

Murdoch said this is not so much a defence department edict as a society decision.

At the present time women officers may serve as engineers, except aboard ships.

They may also serve as logistic officers, doctors and dentists and other roles connected with the two professions, security officers, personnel support officers and in the field of personnel development, which includes chaplains, social welfare officers and other appointments.

LEVESQUE STALKS OUT

Premiers Clash Over Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Government leaders clashed on the controversial issues of housing and transportation policy today as they struggled to come up with specific proposals to help the economy.

As the three-day economic conference drew to a close, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque stalked out ahead of schedule, dismissing the meeting as "essentially a pre-election extravaganza" staged by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Levesque earlier accused the government of bungling housing grants to the provinces. And premiers from both east and west attacked the so-called user-pay formula for transportation payments advocated by Transport Minister Otto Lang. (See other stories on the conference on page 12).

However, the first ministers seem eager to wrap up their economic summit conference with at least one showcase agreement on a project or plan to stimulate the economy and create jobs quickly.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, who is pushing big energy projects, told reporters the conference should come up with a project of the "lighthouse variety" to lead the way.

A new venture such as developing a heavy oil plant in the West or going ahead with East Coast Fundy tidal power would serve the bill and help out some of the nearly one million unemployed.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said "we will have made real progress if we come up with even one major project."

B.C. Premier Bill Bennett served a caution against embracing a series of massive construction projects all at once.

They would provide mainly temporary jobs and not cure unemployment once and for all, he said, and it would put a strain on capital markets to the expense of other policy areas.

"The siren song of a series of massive projects and immediate jobs may be politically sexy," Bennett added, "but it is not the whole answer. There has to be balance in our approach."

The judge issued a warrant for the arrest of Hubbard who is reported to live aboard a luxury yacht in the Atlantic ocean.

PM BLOWS UP AT LEVESQUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lost his temper during closed discussions with Quebec Premier Rene Levesque on the federal system of housing grants, and on dairy policy, provincial sources said today.

Their dispute, which erupted at a dinner meeting Tuesday night of Trudeau and the 10 premiers, blew up again today at the federal-provincial economic conference.

Levesque told the meeting that Quebec lost $64 million in federal housing grants last year because of Ouellet's rigid approach and bureaucratic red tape.

Ouellet retorted that Quebec lost out on the funds because the Quebec Housing Corp., a Crown agency, "is a white elephant that moves at a turtle's pace."

The premier said Ouellet's tone likely "has a foretaste of speeches we will hear in coming months" — a reference to an expected federal election this year.

Following the dinner at Trudeau's home, Levesque said it appeared the federal government was staging the conference largely for electioneering purposes.

It appeared the premiers wanted to keep a tight lid on the fact that the dispute had occurred.

B.C. Oil Find A Bonanza

A significant oil discovery near Fort St. John could increase B.C.'s crude oil production by 10 per cent before the end of 1979, a spokesman for Home Oil Ltd. of Calgary said today.

The company said its subsidiary, Scurry-Rainbow, is developing an oil find that could produce 4,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

At the present level of development, it is producing 1,000 barrels per day. The crude is being trucked to the Trans Mountain pipeline for delivery to refineries in the Vancouver area.

The discovery has created excitement among major oil companies who bid a record $57 million at the winter sale of oil land rights in the area.

The discovery at Eagle, 40 kilometres north of Fort St. John, was made in October, 1976.

But because of government regulations regarding disclosure, no announcement could be made for one year. In October, 1977, the company announced it had discovered oil but no one outside government and industry circles sought details.

"There was too much excitement about big discoveries in Alberta," said Ian Doig, manager of corporate affairs for Home Oil Ltd.

"In a quieter time there would have been a lot of publicity about something like this."

He said people became interested when major oil companies started bidding for land this winter.

"Yesterday and today the phone has just kept ringing," he said.

B.C.'s crude oil resources had been declining until the Scurry-Rainbow discovery.

The company has 13 wells already in place and plans many more. Within 18 months it expects production to be up to 4,000 barrels per day, which might be the upper limit of the present find.

However, the company plans a vigorous exploration program in hopes of finding additional oil.

He said chances are strong for additional discoveries both by Scurry-Rainbow and other exploration firms.

CANCER TEAM GETS CASH

A provincial government cut of $1.3 million in the Cancer Control Agency budget has been restored.

Jim Gilmore, spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association, said Health Minister Bob McClelland had ordered the CCA to cut 10 per cent of its budget several months ago.

Gilmore said the CCA made representation to the minister last November, resulting in the cut being rescinded this week.

Dollar Takes Beating

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar took a heavy beating on the New York money markets Tuesday, closing at a three-month low of $89.75 U.S. cents in hectic trading.

The dollar opened at 90.07 U.S. cents and steadily lost ground throughout the day, dropping by more than a third of a cent by closing time.

A currency trader for the Bank of Montreal attributed the fall to medium-sized commercial selling of the Canadian dollar by investment houses.

He added that rumors some investment houses have revised their predictions on how far the dollar will fall may also be a factor.

"At the root of it all is a continued lack of confidence in the Canadian economy," he said.

February is traditionally a bad month for the dollar because of the number of Canadian tourists spending money abroad.

Last winter, Canadians spent $1 billion abroad while non-Canadian tourists in Canada were spending $192 million.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-20 at $0.8980. Pound sterling was down 3-10 at $1.9340.

Overrun 'Made Money'

Travel Minister Grace McCarthy Tuesday said a $900,000 overrun in her ministry helped generate an additional $129 million in tourist revenues last year.

"I feel it was a very good investment and I don't apologize for it. I'd do it all over again," she said.

McCarthy said the $900,000 special warrant on top of the $4.2 million travel division portion of her ministry is for programs initiated after 1977 budget estimates were drawn up last spring.

Opposition MLAs have criticized McCarthy's over-expenditure, saying she was one of the most vocal critics of NDP overruns when they were in power.

NDP travel industry critic Eileen Dailly (Burnaby North) said she wants to make sure the extra money is being spent to promote the province, not the minister.

Most of the money was used to promote B.C. outside the province, McCarthy said.

"We decided we had to do some revolutionary things. Last year competition for the tourist dollar suddenly became the keenest it ever had," she said.

The $900,000 was well spent, she added, claiming tourism in B.C. increased 15 per cent in 1977, the greatest tourist growth in Canada that year.

She pointed out tourism, with the smallest budget of all 18 provincial ministries, is only one of two (along with economic development) that actually creates business in the province.

"So we put an extra $900,000 into promoting tourism to produce more dollars," she said.

Gas Union Set to Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro gas workers readying for a possible strike early next week said Tuesday they have prepared guidelines for emergency service in the event of a walkout that will guarantee repairs for old age pensioners.

Business agent Rick Dowling said the 600 workers, members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, have offered to provide emergency services in an effort to avoid imposition of the Essential Services Disputes Act, which restricts public service strikes.

The IBEW is prepared to examine each request for service and carry out emergency calls. The union may legally strike Monday.

"If an old age pensioner's home is out of gas we will go in and get gas on for him to get heat," Dowling said. "If a young couple without children are out of gas we probably wouldn't turn it on in that situation.

"It's unfortunate but not every case will be an emergency. But we are aware that we have an obligation to protect gas customers against explosions and fire.

"We will give full emergency service if Hydro gives us a commitment that they will not use supervisors," Dowling said. "If they want to use supervisors then it is clear they would rather hammer the union than protect the public.

"Because we are offering to cover essential services we feel it would be unfair if the labor minister tried to force us to go along with the Essential Services Disputes Act."

Hydro spokesman Dorothy Tupper said in Victoria there will be no immediate interruption of service to gas customers in the event of a strike.

She said supervisors will maintain Hydro's gas plant on Pembroke Street where 44 IBEW members are employed.

Should equipment or lines need servicing then it would be up to the union to decide whether they would be repaired, she said.

At issue is the company's demand for a two-year agreement providing total compensation of 10 per cent. Dowling said union members will not accept a four-per-cent increase in the second year, which falls after anti-inflation guidelines end, and the company has rejected three compromise positions put forward by the union.

NINE ARRESTED IN HEROIN SWOOP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nine British Columbia residents were arrested overnight after an investigation of a major heroin ring which police believe smuggled 50 pounds of the drug worth an estimated $37 million into Canada during the last three years.

The nine accused were to appear in provincial court in nearby Langley today and warrants have been issued for the arrest of five other persons in the Los Angeles area.

A spokesman for the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) said an additional 25 persons, including two Americans and a Calgary resident, are named as unindicted co-conspirators.

Leaders Can't Agree

Some sources said the wealthier provinces of Alberta and British Columbia, involved in disputes earlier Tuesday, took substantially different views from other provinces at the dinner.

Rifts had appeared at the conference as government leaders battled over trade, energy and regional development policies.

The second day of the three-day open meeting featured a remark by Rene Levesque of Quebec that federal officials had panicked by announcing a hodge-podge of future energy projects to give the impression that they were taking quick action to boost economic growth.

The sessions included:

—A confrontation between Prime Minister Trudeau and premiers Lougheed of Alberta and Bennett of British Columbia over current world trade talks. The dispute arose when Trade Minister Jack Horner mentioned the U.S. had given a federal negotiators a confidential list of areas in which it hoped to see lower tariffs.

—A Trudeau rebuff to a suggestion by Ontario William Davis that proposed federal competition be shelved.

—An apparently-successful assault by Atlantic premiers on a B.C. proposition that the federal regional economic expansion department be scrapped.

Tuesday's meeting contrasted with the first day of the conference. Monday the premiers agreed to hold the line on government spending and cut government red tape.

But trade policy, always a controversial topic because of the diverse regional interests across the country, was Tuesday's first topic and the talks soon ran into stormy weather.

Davis, leading the discussion, suggested there should be federal assistance to weaker industries to help them adjust to coming freer world trade.

He was quickly supported by Quebec, which has a variety of industries, such as textiles, clothing, footwear and furniture that are facing low-cost foreign competition.

But Peter Lougheed of Alberta said he was nervous that trade negotiators might throw away advantages benefitting Canadian agriculture in exchange for policies to protect central Canada.

The climate of the meeting worsened when Horner mentioned the U.S. list given to federal negotiators.

Lougheed, supported by Bennett, said the provinces should not be kept in the dark about what the U.S. wants from the negotiations.

A snappish Trudeau, who said at one point that the federal government would "lap it up" if the provinces could settle upon a single trade position in international talks, eventually agreed the provinces would be informed of U.S. requests that could affect them.

An area of snow accompanied a frontal system across southern B.C. this morning. By this evening this will have reached Alberta leaving only scattered snowflurries across the B.C. interior. Sunny breaks can be expected in coastal regions today as a fleeting high pressure ridge pays its respects. The next front is already rushing across the Pacific to bring rain to the north coast before dawn Thursday. The rain area will spread southward reaching south coast regions late Thursday. At the same time a band of snow will cross central and northern parts of the province.

Dancing Lights Tonight?

Skywatchers may get a rare look tonight at aurora borealis, the northern lights that are currently dancing across the skies of northern latitudes.

Victoria is not often clear enough to allow the sometimes wavering flicker to be seen, but the lights were observed Tuesday night at the airport weather office which predicts another clear sky tonight.

Northern light displays are usually seen for several consecutive nights when sunspots are active.

People living in the country, away from urban pollution, city glare or street lighting, have the best chance of seeing aurora borealis.

FIRM SUSPENDS TIPSTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Teamsters Union shop steward was suspended from his warehouse job at Johnston Terminals here Tuesday, after telling reporters about a shipment of barium chloride that, he said, could have proved dangerous to the workers handling it.

The suspension of Jerry Krewik, 22, without pay, is to be followed by termination in "the best interests of the company," the notice from the warehouse manager said.

Alimony 'Grotesque'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A divorced man has been ordered by New York state's highest court to keep paying $160 a month in alimony to his former wife who is living "openly and notoriously" with another man.

Over a dissent that said the "grotesque" ruling would obligate a husband to subsidize his ex-wife's affairs, the Court of Appeals held 5 to 2 on Tuesday that state law requires alimony even for ex-wives who have moved in with other men.

Alimony payments in New York normally end only with the death or remarriage of a former wife, but this case turned on an obscure section of a 1938 law, which allowed the cutoff of payments in instances where an ex-wife is living with a man and "holding herself out as his wife."

The court majority, led by Judge Lawrence Cooke, held that the woman must actually try to pass herself off as legally married to the man before she can lose her alimony payments. Such action would include applying for utility or bank accounts using his name and making statements to other people.

Grits Cancel Plans For Parliament Bash

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal party has withdrawn plans for a giant bash on Parliament Hill, a party for 4,000 persons that at least one wag said was converting the buildings into "Trudeau's Tavern."

Announcement of the cancellation of the Feb. 24 party to be held in connection with the Liberal convention here was made in the Commons by Speaker James Jerome.

He was responding to questions of privilege raised by the opposition last week. Speakers said then the dignity of Parliament was being offended and, in the words of Conservative House Leader, Walter Baker, the Liberals were wallowing in the public trough.

The bash was expected to be the largest held in the buildings. Organizers had said the buildings would be turned into a giant discoteque. There would be 26 bars and three bands.

Last Wednesday opposition MPs expressed their indignation for almost an hour, demanding Jerome revoke his permission to the Liberals to hold the party.

Jerome said Tuesday he would have let the party go on.

TORY TO QUIT

OTTAWA (FP) — Climaxing a bitter two-year feud with Conservative leader Joe Clark, maverick Alberta MP Stan Schumacher will quit the Tories later this week to sit as an independent.

Schumacher's decision follows the rejection Tuesday by Conservative president Bob Coates that he was defeated for an official Tory nomination at a rigged convention.

POSTAL PHOTO TRAIL IS COLD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Post office officials said Tuesday they will probably never find out which postal employees took pictures of a woman who stuck out her tongue at a camera that went through the Vancouver office almost two years ago.

Betty Amos a post office public relations officer said Tuesday that so much time has elapsed since the incident in the summer of 1976 that punishment for such horseplay is unlikely.

The inside postal worker, identified as the one who stuck her tongue out while a fellow employee clicked a camera, told officials she couldn't remember doing so. And the elderly clerk pictured operating a parcel chute machine retired that same summer, "and I'm darn sure he had nothing to do with this mess."

A Crazy Seesaw

It is crazy. The whole system is geared to growth; there is no procedure for decline.

That recent comment by a Toronto school board planner contains the essence of the grim problem school boards all over North America are having to look straight in the face.

Enrolment is declining steadily, but few school boards appear to be seriously planning for that fact. Spending projections and budgets seem to take no account of the shrinking student population (Greater Victoria is an exception, we hasten to add).

Education Minister Pat McGeer has focused on this in a series of letters he mailed out to municipal councils in British Columbia — budget and finance report cards, in effect — which compare two interesting statistics, changes in enrolment figures and school board spending, covering the period 1973-77.

It is a clear and simple exposition of an embarrassing fact, that while the number of students has gone down or risen only slightly in most districts, budgets have ballooned as high as 130 or 140 per cent over the five-year period.

Admittedly, the comparisons are a rough sort of guide open to distortions and liable to hide some perfectly good explanations in individual cases, but over-all they show that school spending has lost touch with reality. Some examples:

Creston-Kaslo school district's enrolment has dropped five per cent since 1973, but the school board's budget doubled. In New Westminster, there was a 21 per cent decline in the number of pupils but spending rose by 63 per cent. West Vancouver's enrolment shrank by 14 per cent but spending jumped 72 per cent. Greater Victoria, which only in the last year has taken hold of the problem, watched enrolment drop 13 per cent but spending rise 71 per cent.

To be sure, some of the increase in spending, as disproportionate to the enrolment decrease as it may seem, is due to efforts directed by the education department to reduce pupil/teacher ratios. Smaller classes have been purchased with bigger budgets. But this doesn't explain everything.

In Vancouver, trustee Peter Westlake claims that administration costs and salaries have risen at a more rapid rate than other costs. Although from 1973 to 1976 the city's schools lost 5,000 students, the Vancouver school system added 281 teachers and several dozen administrators.

Clearly, some school districts have not been looking as closely as they might at ways of cutting costs. McGeer should keep up the pressure.

It Figures

Politicians wonder why they have a bad reputation with the public; they needn't look very far for the reason. Two examples:

In his opening address to the conference of first ministers on the economy, Prime Minister Trudeau said proudly that under his administration 250,000 new jobs had been created during 1977.

Ahem. Actually, according to Statistics Canada, 182,000 jobs were created. The slight difference of 30 per cent results from the PM's clever way of comparing only the last quarters of 1976 and 1977, instead of the full years, as does StatsCan in compiling the real figures.

Then Trudeau told the nation his Liberal government presided over a $3 billion goods trade surplus last year — triple the 1976 figure. He made a tiny oversight (forgive us, sir, for quibbling so): there was a $7 billion services trade deficit due mostly to the hordes of Canadian tourists spending dollars outside the country, and interest and dividend payments which left Canada. Leaving a deficit on current accounts of $4 billion.

But then, to a government which has run up a $9 billion budget deficit this year, what's a mere billion or three?

Example two of Ottawa's rosy arithmetic: Finance Minister Jean Chretien told the assembled premiers he envisioned a bare bones staff of 100 civil servants for the price and wage monitoring agency which will replace the Anti-Inflation Board this year when controls are dismantled.

Polite chuckles greeted this claim. People remember his predecessor's statement that the AIB would require only 200 people to keep track of incomes and prices. In fact, it topped out at 928.

Positive Problems

So they think they have problems in Alberta! The rapid growth resulting from the energy boom is causing an increase in prejudice and in crime, especially juvenile crime, according to the director of social planning in Edmonton. The number of people flooding into the province in search of jobs has pushed up housing prices steeply (in Edmonton they've have almost tripled in a decade, from an average of $22,000 in 1968 to $62,779 now). The government would like to see some projects delayed a year or two so the boom will last a bit longer.

On the positive side, they admit, the provincial government has more money than it knows what to do with as a result of record oil and gas royalties. Unemployment is only 4.7 per cent, little more than half the national average. And there doesn't seem to be any reason to believe the boom will let up before 1980.

Given those positives, any other government in the country would be more than willing to try to cope with those problems.

Government by Committee

OTTAWA — Behind the ranks of officials seated behind Prime Minister Trudeau, and reaching almost to the line of Boston ferns and yellow chrysanthemums strung along a niche high up in the wall of the conference centre, you probably noticed on your television screens a tall row of flags. Eleven of them, each of equal size. One for each government at the first ministers' conference.

Because the camera angle was bad, you probably didn't notice that the pole in the middle, carrying the maple leaf flag, was nine inches or so taller than the provincial standards to its left and its right.

A handy metaphor that — not 10 little flags beneath one big one but 10 equal-sized flags with the centre one just a shade higher than the others — for the character of Canadian federalism in 1978.

King James Bible

Most Canadians, as a legacy of the war, grew up thinking of Canada as a country run, as are most others, by a national government, with certain local responsibilities handled by provincial governments. No longer. Canada, in 1978, is being run by 11 national governments, each with different, though often overlapping and competing, national responsibilities.

Federalism is an excruciatingly difficult system to make work. Essentially, it is government by committee. A committee did write the King James Bible. Few since then have excelled. At their best, committees grope for consensus at their lowest common denominator; at their worst, they pass the buck around the table.

Yet whether for good or ill, and no matter how messy and confusing, federalism is as natural to Canada as is our winter. British Columbia Premier Bill Bennett made the point when he commented that Canada was composed of "five distinct, self-contained regions," and then followed with the non sequitur of demanding "a single, comprehensive, national policy."

And then there's Quebec. Always will be, no matter how the referendum turns out.

The nine English-speaking premiers were almost frantic to prove by being statesmanlike and farsighted and by singing the praises of "co-operation" and "consultation" that federalism could be made to work. "Weren't we amicable? Why don't you write that? My God, we were trying so hard to be amicable," commented one premier whom I buttonholed at the end of the day.

Premier Rene Levesque, naturally, could afford to be prickly. His face breaking every now and then into a puckish, pouty grin, Levesque happily got off potshots off at the federal system that he wants to get out of. Levesque complained of "conferences piled on conferences," of "a thicket of bureaucratic confusion," and proposed that each level of government limit itself strictly to its own responsibilities and that co-operation, where necessary, "be rapid."

As a test of whether federalism in fact can be made to work, the conference looks likely to earn a C-. A low pass mark, that is. But still a passing grade.

Certainly it was amicable. Too amicable in fact. In one of the rare departures from the orotund generalities, PEI's Alex Campbell took a wing-shot at Ontario Premier Bill Davis' proposed "Buy Canada" campaign by commenting that, since most manufactured goods came from there, this would mean in effect a "Buy Ontario" campaign.

Certainly there was no overt politicking, except by Nova Scotia's election-bound Gerald Regan who arrived complete with his own camera crew and who talked a great deal about fish.

Like any committee, though, the conference could agree on nothing more ambitious than its lowest common denominator. Everyone agreed, as it is now politically popular to do, that civil servants are being paid too much. Everyone, Saskatchewan's Allan Blakeney excepted, agreed that governments are spending too much. No one agreed on how much civil servants should be paid, nor on how much governments should spend. Everyone as well agreed that medium term economic arguments would be useful. No one agreed on what they should be.

Lowest Denominator

To be fair, there was one other agreement. Unanimously, the 11 heads of government agreed to establish a task force to draft possible terms of reference for study of how government regulatory agencies might be reformed.

If you yourself are unemployed, or fear the return of inflation, or worry that Canada is becoming "de-industrialized," or believe that our branch plant economy needs to be utterly uprooted, then nothing said or done at the conference so far will send you more soundly to sleep.

Yet something still has been accomplished. Though awkward and mostly ineffectual, the conference does represent our first real try at governing by committee. It's a system we have to make work, since it's in the nature of Canada. To make it work, mind you, Trudeau and the premiers are going to have to try far, far harder.

Now mostly rural, area south of Mt. Douglas is to be developed.

Braefoot

In the Times of Feb. 10 under the heading Braefoot: Big Winners . . . Big Losers, Paul Moss wrote an accurate account of the Feb. 9 public hearing of the Saanich council's draft plan for the Braefoot area. Mr. Moss wrote about the potential, immediate gains and losses of the land speculators and Braefoot residents; he only hinted at the larger and more permanent losses which the rest of us and our children will suffer if this rezoning plan should be approved.

The beauty and charm of the Braefoot area, with its mixture of natural vegetation and cultivated acres, was well-illustrated by the photographs shown at the hearing.

At present Braefoot is zoned rural. Council still has the option to maintain this zoning.

This would save magnificent stands of Garry oaks, a species unique to our area, and which are threatened because they grow in well-drained sites suitable for building. Fine old Douglas firs and a holly wood will also be cut down to clear building sites, to build new roads, and to widen existing ones. Much of the leafy charm of Glendenning Road will be desecrated.

Blacktail deer and innumerable small animals and birds will be evicted by the bulldozer. Migrating waterfowl, which currently stop over on the Bow Road Pond, will doubtless seek other, less disturbed, water away from the suburbs. Saanich, the land of plenty in Indian tongue, will have taken one more step towards the fate of a more southern Hollywood. All that will be left of Braefoot will be a token four per cent of its beauty, tidied up into mini-parks for the children whose birthrights were sold. — Alan G. Clews, 3910 Shorncliffe Road South.

Casino Night

It was announced recently that plans are underway to hold a casino night at a community centre in the city. This is to be a kind of test run, presumably with the hope that a gambling casino can be established on a permanent basis.

At a recent meeting of the Victoria Council of Churches the executive unanimously agreed to raise our collective voice in opposition to such an enterprise. Gambling is anti-social in its nature in that the happiness of the winner becomes the misery of the loser. It is based solely on selfishness and greed, and has absolutely no redeeming qualities to justify its inception.

Wherever such an enterprise operates, it brings in its wake a whole assortment of troubles. Those who promote gambling always try to assure the public that it is going to be a nicely-run, clean kind of operation. They fail to recognize they are dealing with a Frankenstein's monster which at birth may be docile and manageable but which develops into something they cannot control.

In Alberta where casinos were legalized under the guise of charity some years ago, they began very quietly. Now the casino trade has become a craze. Casinos are operating 16 hours a day in Calgary and licensing officials are swamped with 10 applicants for every opening. Maclean's stated in its Oct. 3 issue: "Government and police are growing increasingly uneasy." Attorney-General Jim Foster worries at regular intervals that casinos will be infiltrated by professional criminals. Calgary police chief Brian Sawyer, calls casinos "dangerous moral corrupters ... temptations for crime figures."

We in the Council of Churches are concerned about the quality of life that the people of our city can enjoy. We hope and trust and pray that all people who share this concern will join together in united opposition to such an enterprise. — Alfred J. C. Johnson, President, Victoria Council of Churches, 3781 Cedar Hill.

Comedians

Trevor Griffith's play, Comedians, was billed by the London Times as "provocative, thoughtful, unforgettable," by The Globe and Mail as "savage, exciting and riveting," by The Vancouver Sun as "shocking but engrossing. The Comedians (played by Jimmy Jewel and Laurence Olivier when it opened in the National Theatre of London) was heralded as a masterpiece in what makes comedy tick.

Victorian audiences have been reacting strongly: 162 stormed out of the McPherson during a Sunday matinee and the count now stands at 450. The reaction is as strongly positive as it is negative and is creating a stir.

Phone calls have ranged from "How can Bastion present a play about the lower class to the upper classes of Victoria" and "The play is disgusting, filthy and without one redeeming feature; to present it on the stage is an insult to the audience." On the other hand, anonymous donations have come with comments such as "Thanks for Comedians" and some have said that although they normally didn't attend theatre, they will from now on.

Theatre-goers have gone backstage to tell actors that they were "moved, shocked, numbed" by their fine performances. Yet there was one member of the audience who defaced the actors' pictures in the lobby with lipstick.

The language in Comedians is very coarse but surely the words are not as wrong as the intent behind such words as "fear, kill, hate." The philosophy presented in Comedians is powerful, as it is an uncomfortable examination of the guts of humor and the sensibilities of those laughing at it and dishing it out.

The humor comes from an area in England where people were overworked and underpaid in the dark Satanic mills of Lancashire for more than 150 years and as a result of this experience a savage type of humor evolved.

But the lines in the production are true. "Most comics feed fear and blinkered vision but the best ones illuminate them, make them clearer to see, easier to deal with. We've got to make people laugh till they cry, cry till they find their pain and beauty. Comedy is medicine, not colored sweeties to rot their teeth." — Judith A. Kerr, Promotions Director, Bastion Theatre Company.

Sex Education

I can appreciate much of what Lorraine Locherty wrote about the family life education program in our public schools (They're Helping Take the Mystery Out of Sex, Times Feb. 9) but I cannot share her belief that the scientific treatment and the absence of moral judgments in this program can be of real help to the students.

We are told that our haphazard approach to the facts of life has increased venereal disease, unplanned pregnancies and abortions in recent years. But we are also informed that the family life education program was started some 15 years ago. And when I read that veneral disease is now raging in epidemic proportions, and that the number of abortions continues to increase in our city, every year, I am puzzled.

Of course, education in human sexuality is important. However, when we try to take the mystery out of sex by helping our young people to study sexuality scientifically I cannot hope for real improvements in human relations.

Sex is a beautiful part of human life, but we must not study it and cannot truly enjoy it without seeking the will of Him who gave it to us for our life enrichment. — Peter W. DeBruyne, 4160 Glanford Avenue.

Economy is for Others

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

"The first day in office we abolished the patronage system. This is not a spoils system party. This is not a patronage party." — Premier Bill Bennett, Social Credit convention, November, 1977.

Premier Bennett arrived in Ottawa on the weekend — after stopping off in Toronto to visit with the editorial boards of the Toronto Globe and Mail, Toronto Star and Maclean's — for the economic summit, this week's crucial meeting of the 10 premiers with the prime minister.

His pitch is the demand that Canadians indeed are living beyond their means, that we must cut government spending, that we must somehow wake up to the fact that governments now spend 42 per cent of Canada's Gross National Product.

So true. But shall we look at Bill Bennett's personal record? Is he a hypocrite? In the past I've detailed the NDP's patronage record and the early Socred record. Now there's further evidence from other sources. Let's take a look.

As soon as he was elected, Premier Bennett hired his long-time companion and relative Tony Tozer (his sister is married to Tozer's brother) as his executive assistant at $36,432. Dan Campbell, the former Socred minister under W. A. C. Bennett, was made director of inter-governmental relations at $36,432.

Dave Brown, the former James Lovick advertising chap and campaign aide to Bennett, was commissioned at $150 a day to deliver a report on communications. It recommended the hiring of a "communications planning director" — who surprisingly turned out to be Dave Brown, at $36,432.

John Arnett, who was in the education portfolio, was brought in as press secretary at $28,000. Bennett, in a bit of subterfuge, appointed an ex-RCMP man named Norman Sharp as his driver with the title of administrative assistant at $19,000. When the whistle was blown on this caper in the legislature, Sharp was shifted to public works so his salary wouldn't show under the premier's office, but he's still the premier's driver at $13,000.

An administrative assistant was then hired at $19,500, an administrative assistant to Tony Tozer at $18,780 and a research officer at $24,000. Late last year, Dave Roach came on as assistant to assistant John Arnett — at $17,000. Ron Greig came on as assistant to Brown — at $17,500. Total bill for all this in the premier's office, as the NDP claims, is some $247,000 a year — not including secretaries or clerical help.

Next, there's Deputy-Premier Grace McCarthy, a sanctimonious crusader against socialist waste. First thing she did was appoint her campaign manager, John Plul, as "provincial convention co-ordinator" at $27,000. That was upgraded last December to an unspecified range up to $32,000. The day after an order-in-council upgraded Mr. Plul, a Duncan Holmes, sales manager of the Vancouver Convention and Visitors Bureau, was hired as Plul's assistant.

Dick Lillico, who became a secretary-companion to W. A. C. Bennett after the 1972 election and worked for the Socreds in the 1975 election, was hired at $22,236 to become "director of information services" at B.C. House in London. Dianne Hartwick, defeated candidate for presidency of the Socred party, was hired at $19,500 and worked out of the human resources department. Track star Harry Jerome, after supporting the Socreds, was given a six-month commission to study the sport and recreation field. Total pork barrel bill for Amazing Grace is nearly $100,000 a year.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom? Acquired as $19,500 executive assistant one Doug Strongitharm, former Socred caucus executive assistant, and then changed his title to "special projects assistant," a range that tops out at $27,060.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair, with his good Liberal connections, brought on two former assistants to federal minister Ron Basford: deputy minister Tex Enemark at $43,000 and consumer affairs administrator Perry Anglin.

Minister of Economic Development Don Phillips: Hired his constituency secretary Arthur Cameron at $19,500 and Arthur Weeks, an aide to Bill Bennett, at $29,000. Both had to resign for conflict of interest in the Grizzly Valley caper.

Education Minister Pat McGeer: Hired his Liberal party assistant Jim Bennett, at $19,500.

Transport Minister Jack Davis: Appointed his son-in-law at $19,500 and was forced to dismiss him when the story came out. Hired Lou Madley, long-time Socred worker from the W.A.C. days, at a range of up to $25,536.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe: Hired Vancouver South Socred worker Richard Ewings at $19,500.

Forestry Minister Tom Waterland: His first executive assistant, Ian Fothergill, resigned after it was discovered that his son, who had done PR work for the Socreds during the election campaign, had been hired by Waterland to recommend how the department could improve its public relations. Waterland has since hired two more executive assistants.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser: Hired as executive assistant the husband of his foster daughter and then increased his salary from $19,500 to $29,000.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis: Hired former Socred constituency secretary Wayne Steeds and radio reporter Clark Housley, both at $19,500.

Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf: Released his former constituency secretary Lucy Wyse so he could hire legislative reporter Maury Gwynne and then created a new position as "administrative clerk" so he could hire back Lucy Wyse. Wendy Robertson, the tennis and jogging partner of Premier Bennett, was appointed "provincial fitness co-ordinator" at $28,800.

Further, the Bennett government has sprinkled its various boards with patronage appointments too numerous to mention. The Bonners and Willistons are well known. The chairman of the B.C. Development Corporation is former Socred MLA Newell Morrison. The directors include David Radler, employer of Arthur Weeks, and Herb Doman, former business partner of the Bennetts. Three of the members of the B.C. Land Commission are Socred party members.

Graeme Roberts, the defeated Socred candidate, is on the B.C. Ferry Corporation. Tom Toynbee, well-known Socred, is chairman of the Housing Corporation of B.C. Syd Welsh, a card-carrying Socred, is on the B.C. Railway royal commission. The man appointed to decide electoral reform in B.C. is former judge Larry Eckardt, a defeated Socred candidate.

Les Peterson, the former Socred attorny-general, has been appointed to the UBC board of governors.

Everything Mr. Bennett said in Ottawa this week about government waste and cynicism is true but he has a credibility problem in his own back yard.

Where is Science Leading? More Hockey, Horseradish and Happiness

By DANIEL GREENBERG
Washington Post

It has not been my observation that cannibalism, chocolate, constipation, horseradish or hockey posed more problems in 1976 than in 1973. But we are now reliably informed that during that short span researchers worldwide sharply increased their production of learned papers on these and many other subjects.

The finding comes from the computerized omnivore of the world's scholarly periodical literature, the Institute for Scientific Information, which systematically ingests journals by the thousands and electronically registers their contents according to an assortment of categories. From this Philadelphia-based organization now comes a regurgitation of data that enlivens the old question: Where is science taking us?

Even allowing for the inexorable expansion of research endeavors, and ISI's own growing coverage of the world's scholarly literature — it collected 477,000 articles in 1973 and 578,000 in 1976 — many of the findings are indeed peculiar.

From ISI's analysis, based on key words in article titles, it is not surprising to find, for example, that references to the Apollo moon-landing program dropped from 85 to 21 in those years. There was just so much to be found out about the moon rocks, and despite scientific ingenuity at getting into print, the 1973 pace could not be maintained, no matter how powerful the spur of publish-or-perish or the lure of scientific glory. Similarly, titles containing "fall-out" — presumably referring to the nuclear variety — went down, from 50 to 31, apparently reflecting a decline in bomb testing in the atmosphere.

But it's the figures that have gone up that invite attention. Cannibalism, for instance, registered a startling increase, going from seven in 1973 to 33 in 1976 — a surge of interest for which there is no obvious explanation. Titles containing the word "nude" scored an even more spectacular increase, from 33 to 139, but ICI President Eugene Garfield provides a plausible, non-erotic explanation for that change: "We strongly suspect," he writes, "that the increase in frequency reflects increasing experimental use of the nude mouse, a hairless mutant . . . incresingly popular in cancer and immunological research . . ."

But no such simple explanations are available to help us understand the booming activities in other sectors of the frontiers of knowledge. Hockey, for example, has been with us for some considerable time, and to the extent that it's a researchable subject, one might assume that it was pretty well worked over years ago. Why, then, does the world's scientific literature show a more than 1,000-per-cent increase in research papers bearing the word "hockey" — from two in 1973 to 25 in 1976? In that same period, why did constipation increase by 91 per cent, while diarrhea rose by a mere 61 per cent? And what is there about horseradish that sent its publication tally zooming from 50 to 147? And what was it that inspired researchers to take on the problems of chocolate to an extent that papers on that subject rose from 11 to 27?

ISI provides no insights on these matters. But a number of shifts do speak for themselves. We find, for instance, that happiness is a growth industry, at least among researchers. The count on that topic is up from 14 to 33, reflecting, it may be assumed, the willingness of science to attempt to overcome shortages of any kind. Big gains were also scored in other topics that deeply concern our era: sexism (10 to 46), sexual (18 to 36) and sexuality (65 to 216).

But many of the shifts defy easy explanation. Why did papers bearing "sister" or "sisters" in their titles increase from 43 to 107 in the years 1973-76? And what is there about song and songs that sent that category up from 42 to 97? Or snake and snakes from 124 to 220?

C. P. Snow, who knows them well, tells us that scientists are especially endowed with foresight.

What do you suppose they see that the rest of us may be missing?

Fiction and the Novelist

LONDON--There were no eggshells in the hedge the day I went to visit novelist Beryl Bainbridge; but there were nine dirty milk bottles on the step, the bikes blocking the dark little entrance had got a light knocked out, and there wasn't a number on her house at the unsmart end of Albert Street.

It's questionable whether there's a smart end to Albert Street, this area of London being so teeming with Irish and Cypriots, Pakistanis and intellectuals and drunks; the district fits this skinny jeans-clad lady like a glove. And I mean a silky, antique, jet-beaded Victorian glove, with a hole in it.

It is all straight out of Injury Time, her latest short, funny tragic best-selling novel: "I can't write fiction, you see," she says; presumably meaning she just lifts long dripping strands of real life from the pot and cuts them off randomly.

Sweet William was about a real philandering lover, the vast heroine of The Bottle Factory Outing was her neighbor: "She only forgave me because I put her weight down from 250 lbs. to 170;" and Beryl worked at the factory herself — "you got as much as you could drink; what with the booze and the cold I was always being carried home early."

Her boy friend is the one described with such splendid malice in Injury Time (and still around, amazing) — she's tried quite unsuccessfully to talk him out of his obsession with finance. "We lie awake at night talking about Trust Funds," she says resignedly. And her children are presumably just as horrible, though she plainly adores them.

But the violence in her books isn't real, she says. She just feels it round her, everywhere; and the house reflects it. Inside it looks as if it must be just as she took it over, all dark brown paint and dingy broken lampshades and moribund plants. Yet her ex-husband got it up in white and stripped pine and it took her a lot of time and trouble to get it back to its original sinister condition, installing such treasures as a vast brass bed, faded sepia portraits of First World War soldiers and a leg which sticks out from one wall like a hunting trophy.

"I don't like that doll with the empty eyesocket either, she says, "but I just can't throw anything away."

She had an extraordinary upbringing in Liverpool, growing up through the ceaseless rowing of a mother who was obsessively ambitious and respectable — she would pay $40 for a child's coat because the neighbors saw that, "but we none of us had pyjamas — I still find it amazing that everyone has their own toothbrush."

Her father was a bankrupt and a failure and couldn't sign his own cheques; and died at 72 of heart failure because he suspected his wife (wrongly) of looking elsewhere. Beryl went to stage school, and to grammar school and left home at 16 with a shudder.

So did she spring on to the London scene at 20 years of age, novel in hand? Anything but. She married an artist, Austin Davis, who left her when their lastest child was six weeks old, "because he'd read Colin Wilson's The Outsider and suddenly saw himself as a Rebel in Society."

She had a few walk-on stage parts, picked up odd jobs and raised the children. Her first book never saw the light, the second, which was actually the extraordinarily powerful Harriet said . . . published later, was considered too shocking for the public, her third sank like a stone and she stopped writing altogether for years.

Only when she met a new small publisher through her children did she get going again in 1971 at the age of 37 — and now is as astonished as she'e pleased by her success: "People are so nice to you, especially friends' husbands, you used always to feel you were in the way; now they actually engage you in conversation!"

Believing, unlike so many, that it's self-indulgent not to give the reader a plot, she always looks up something startling in old newspapers and mixes it in with her own experience: Harriet said . . . was her own childhood plus the story of those two murderous New Zealand girls; Injury Time was an IRA kidnapping in London and her next will take up the possibility that Hitler came to Britain in 1911 to visit his brother Patrick Hitler, to whom his last words on leaving were "I'll pay you for everything" — and he had him gassed in 1943.

A couple of hours with Beryl Bainbridge and the normal, respectable world begins to swim and blur as if seen through a heat haze; you begin to doubt if they are real, in the face of a dark, individualistic jungle, in which there are no patterns, in which you live day by day, in which nothing is rational so nothing is particularly surprising.

The rest of us draw our lives round us like blankets; Beryl Bainbridge just keeps walking through it, with people and events blowing against her for no reason, like newspaper.

She says she's happy, happier than she's ever been; not expecting more than she gets with her odd lover and her strange children, childishly pleased with having money and success, events which seem as random to her as being broke and a failure.

Isn't she ever lonely, then, or sad? "I've passed the age for sadness," says this woman of 44.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Plummeting prices in heavyweight issues sent the Toronto stock market down more than four points Wednesday in active mid-afternoon trading.

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. slumped 2⅜ to $10⅝ a share on the sale of 33,643 shares following its resumption about 12:30 p.m. after the company announced the omission of the current quarter's dividend. The statement said a loss of about $38 million is expected for the period.

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. rose 80 cents to $5.50 a share on the sale of 1,500 shares after resuming at the opening, while the trading halt continued in shares of Bridger Petroleum Ltd., last at $11.75 a share.

Na-Churs International Ltd., halted at the opening, has announced that "certain favorable corporate developments" will be disclosed Thursday. It last traded at $7⅝ a share.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost more ground at New York, with the Dow Jones industrial average groping for support at its lowest levels in nearly three years.

Coal industry officials rejected President Carter's call for an immediate resumption of negotiations between the industry and the United Mine Workers.

Just before noon, when the Dow was down about five points, they reversed their position and agreed to take part in talks at the White House. The resumption of negotiations was slated for 8 p.m. EST.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were slightly lower in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. was 325,300 shares, compared with 293,200 shares traded up to the same time Tuesday.

Massey-Ferguson lost 2⅛ at $10⅞, CP Ltd. ⅛ at $16⅞, Husky Oil ¼ at $27⅜ and Norcen Energy Resources ⅛ at $15⅛. Noranda A gained ¼ at $23, Royal Trust A ⅛ at $15⅞ and Resource Service Group four cents at $2.00.

London

LONDON (CP) — Continued reaction to the January current account deficit sent prices sharply lower near the close of moderate trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index dropped 7.5 to 452.2 an hour before the close. Leading industrials recorded heavy declines, while oil stocks dropped and gold issues climbed with higher bullion prices. Canadian stocks were steady to fractionally lower.

Tax Tips '78

Q. I paid $1,500 in alimony to my former spouse last year. Can I claim all of this on my income tax return?

A. There is no dollar limit on the amount of alimony that can be deducted. You may claim the full amount paid in the year as long as the payments are made on a periodic basis for the maintenance of your spouse and, or children, and are in accordance with a decree, a court order or a written agreement.

Q. How much may be deducted for child care expenses and does it matter to whom the payments are made?

A. A taxpayer may deduct the amount actually spent on child care provided it does not exceed the least of:

—$1,000 per child, or
—$4,000 for the family, or —two-thirds of the taxpayer's earned income for the year.

Child care expenses are not deductible if they are paid to a person claimed as a dependant for tax purposes by either of the parents, or to a person under 21 who is related to either parent by blood, marriage or adoption. Also, any allowable deduction for child care expenses must be supported by a receipt which indicates the name, address and Social Insurance Number of the person to whom payments were made.

A father may claim child care expenses provided he meets the qualifications outlined on Schedule 5 of the Income Tax Package.

Q. What deductions may be transferred between spouses?

A. There are five deductions that may be transferred between spouses:

—Age Exemption
—Interest, Dividend and Capital Gains Deduction
—Pension Income Deduction
—Deduction for persons blind or confined to a bed or wheelchair
—Education Deduction

If your spouse is eligible for any of the above deductions and had no taxable income, the unused portion of the deductions can be transferred to your return.

To determine the transferable amount, Schedule 9 should be completed and attached to your income tax return.

Q. My only income is my Old Age Pension. Do I have to file an income tax form?

A. Not unless you are requested to do so by the Tax Department. However, if you resided in British Columbia, Ontario, or Manitoba on December 31, 1977, you may be entitled to a provincial tax credit which can only be obtained by filing an income tax form.

My wife owns the house we live in. Can I apply for a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan?

A. Starting January 1, 1978, you may no longer apply for a RHOSP or make any more contributions to an existing plan if at the time you apply, you are living with your spouse who owned a home during that year and the immediately preceding year and anyone lived in that property during those years.

Canada Trust

Canada Trust Co. of London, Ont., reports 1977 earnings of $30 million or $3.50 a share, up from $17.7 million or $2.47 the previous year.

Arthur Mingay, president, attributed the improved earnings to the difference in interest rates charged borrowers and paid to depositors, control of costs and an increase in business volume.

The company opened 13 new branches in 1977 and will open 10 more this year, Mingay said.

J. Allyn Taylor, chairman, will retire at the annual meeting Feb. 21, Mingay said.

Cominco

Cominco Ltd. of Vancouver has announced consolidated net earnings of $62.2 million or $3.43 a share in 1977, up from $47.7 million or $2.66 a share the previous year.

Sales were $759.2 million, compared with $725 million in 1976.

F. E. Burnet, chairman and chief executive officer, said in a news release lead production increased to meet strong demand at prices significantly higher than in 1976. Prices for gold, silver, tin and electrical power were also above 1976 levels, he said.

The decline in value of the Canadian dollar relative to the United States dollar had a beneficial impact on the company's earnings from export sales, he said.

Goodyear Canada

Goodyear Canada Inc. of Toronto had net income of $9.3 million or $3.57 a share in 1977, up from $6.2 million or $2.33 the previous year, the company has announced.

Fourth-quarter earnings were down to $2.8 million from $3.5 million in the same three months of 1976.

Robert Hicks, president, said net income for the year was the third highest in the company's history despite a disappointing demand for tires in the second half.

He attributed the profit improvement to cost-reduction programs, higher operating efficiency and product improvements.

HOW TO CHOOSE A RSP WHEN THEY ALL LOOK THE SAME.
Sure, at first glance all RSP's look the same.
Down the block they may offer flexibility. Around the corner, interest compounded monthly. While across town it's competitive interest rates.
Now, what makes the Permanent's RSP different? Simply this: in our Guaranteed Fund we presently combine all three. Flexibility. Interest compounded monthly. Competitive interest rates. Not only that, there are no initiation or annual administration fees and the maximum close-out fee is only $100.00.
So maybe at first glance all RSP's do look the same, but they're not. Stop in at the Permanent branch nearest you and find out more about the Permanent RSP.
Our branches can also tell you about our Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan (RHOSP).

Whirlpool Opened Up, Capsized Fishing Boat

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — A coroner's jury has ruled that Betty-Lou Lambert, 29, and her son Jason, four months, died accidentally when a fishing boat carrying seven Port Hardy residents overturned Nov. 28.

The 55-foot boat capsized in a whirlpool in Seymour Narrows. Still missing and presumed drowned, is Forrest Lambert, 65.

The six-man jury returned a verdict of accidental death by drowning and placed no blame on any of the people on board the boat.

Bruce Rafuse, 31, told the inquest he was steering the vessel, heading for Deep Water Bay, when a whirlpool opened up right in front of the boat, causing it to capsize.

Maxine Anderson, 21, was rescued by a diver from Canadian Forces Base Comox after being trapped for two hours in an air pocket inside the overturned vessel.

Her husband Fred, 33, Betty's husband Kenneth, 28, and Rafuse were rescued by a fishing vessel.

Cpl. Dick Hall of the RCMP told the inquest he felt that failure to place the seine net into the fish tank was a major contributing factor to the accident. He said the net was rolled on the drum, and the boat had little or no ballast.

Less than 20% Veto Contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — The tentative master freight and cartage contract in the B.C. trucking industry was rejected Tuesday by less than one fifth of the membership of two locals of the Teamsters Union.

Individual drivers who checked on the results of a ratification count said they were told that only about 800 of some 4,500 members of local 31 and 213 participated in the vote.

They said the 800 turned down the two-year pact by a 60 per cent majority.

Teamsters officials declined comment on the reports, indicating nothing will be said officially until Local 31 president Doug McLeod returns Tuesday night from a trip to San Diego.

The tentative agreement was negotiated with Transport Labor Relations, representing 97 companies, and proposed a six per cent wage settlement this year and 10 per cent in total wage and fringe benefits in 1979.

Grant Bids Turned Away

The buck stops at the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee — at least it did for three groups that went looking for handouts there Tuesday.

Turned down, or at least turned away, in their requests for money were the Victoria Rape Relief Centre, the former Victoria City Police Community Band, and a freelance writer who wants to get together with a photographer and an archivist and produce a glossy book on the city.

The Rape Centre and the band may still get the funding they require, but it'll have to come from somewhere else. Their requests were referred to a committee set up to screen grants.

Freelance writer Betty Campbell fared less well when she asked the committee to subsidize a book she wants to put together with the help of city archivist Ainslee Helmcken and photographer Jim Ryan.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said he liked the idea of a coffee table book on the city, but he didn't think the municipalities should pay for it.

All in the family

Boost Handouts to Needy In Place of DREE: Bennett

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett argued Tuesday that the federal regional economic expansion department should be scrapped in favor of more handouts to needy persons, but leaders from the Atlantic provinces trampled the idea.

And Quebec wants to opt out of Ottawa's regional economic expansion program (DREE) and receive block funding instead, Bernard Landry, economic development minister in the Parti Quebecois government, told the federal-provincial economic conference.

Both Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick and Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia vigorously opposed Bennett's suggestion, arguing that statistics proved that payments through the department to companies had been effective in creating jobs and diversifying their industrial base.

Bennett maintained that money had been given to rich corporations that did not need it and that a system of payments to those in need might be more effective in reducing regional disparity.

He also suggested that transfers of tax-raising powers to the provinces might help the poorer regions of the country.

Federal officials had at one point last year been considering the elimination of the department, but Prime Minister Trudeau has denied the program will be chopped.

Regan attacked Bennett's proposal, saying it might be difficult for the B.C. government to realize problems faced by the economy in the Atlantic provinces and eastern Quebec.

B.C.'s unemployment, about 8.5 per cent recently, was due to depressed markets for the province's major resources, said Regan. But the high jobless totals in the eastern provinces were chronic.

Quebec's Landry argued: "When we get less than our tax share, this is not a fair distribution to a disadvantaged region."

Landry said Quebec wants to get a lump sum payment from the federal government proportional to its level of economic inequality.

He said Quebec should be able to administer its own funds to avoid administrative tie-ups in the federal bureaucracy.

Aid Forestry, Ottawa Asked

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces are asking the federal government to pump funds into the forestry products industry so it can become competitive once again on international markets.

The plea came in a paper prepared by Newfoundland Forestry Minister Ed Maynard on behalf of his provincial counterparts and released Tuesday at the three-day meeting of Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 premiers.

The paper said the forestry industry badly needs capital for modernization so Canadian products can compete better on international markets.

However, modernization could result in a short-term reduction of employment.

"But failure to take this action would result in even greater loss of employment through mill closures,' Maynard said.

About 300,000 Canadians are employed directly in the forestry products industry. An additional 400,000 to 600,000 are employed in secondary manufacturing and service industries.

Maynard's paper also urged the federal government to spend more on research and development and to allocate Canada Works funds — to subsidize job s— into forest management.

The paper noted that transportation systems must also be improved if the industry's competiveness is to be improved.

The inaccessibility of much of Canada's forests cause the final price of products to be more expensive than those of such competitors as the United States, Scandinavia and Brazil.

Canada's share of world markets for forest products has declined to 18.9 per cent in 1974 from 31 per cent in 1955.

Along with higher production costs in Canada, the domestic market experiences an unstable work force which results in shortages and work stoppages, a federal position paper says.

THREE OLDSTERS WIN HERITAGE AWARDS

Three Victoria buildings constructed in the late 1800s and restored in 1977 have been selected by the Hallmark Society for its annual heritage awards.

Cited for showing the community what a facelift can do to crumbling old structures are Don Wells, for restoring a Victoria West residence built in 1890; William Langlois, for his work on a James Bay house put up in 1892, and Adrian Greenbank, for bringing life back to the old American Hotel, at 533 Yates St.

The American Hotel was built in 1876 for J.S. Yates, who practised law in the city for 60 years. The hotel became a warehouse for liquor merchants around 1885 and is now home to Old British Fish and Chips Ltd.

Langlois' house, at 116 South Turner St., was originally the home of Andrew Schnoter who came to Victoria in 1886 and opened the first cigar factory in the city.

Wells' house, at 1020 Catherine St., was built for John Cherry, a prominent local furniture manufacturer in the 1890s.

Hallmark president Candy Wyatt said that "by bringing new life to old buildings the people to be honored have brought new life to old neighborhoods."

She praised the three for their restoration projects and said that "these days smart businessmen and heritage enthusiasts have something in common. They can look at old buildings and say 'You're not getting older, you're getting better.' "

The awards will be presented tonight at 8 in a ceremony at Victoria's historic Emily Carr House.

Doman Profits Double

DUNCAN — Doman Industries Ltd. had record sales of $92 million and profits more than doubled to $5.9 million in 1977, president H.S. Doman said Tuesday.

"I've never entered a year with more confidence," he said.

He said world demand for lumber is strong and orders should continue to be brisk throughout the year.

Sales in 1977 were up about 31 per cent from $68.9 million the previous year.

Profits were more than double the $2.8 million earned in 1976.

Earnings per share hit 90 cents, up from 44 cents one year earlier.

At Dec. 31, working capital was over $20 million, up from $6.8 million one year earlier.

Pilot Didn't Alter Course: Snowplow Man

CRANBROOK (CP) — A Pacific Western Airlines jet that crashed at Cranbrook airport last Saturday killing 42 persons did not alter course to avoid a snowplow on the runway, the plow's operator said Tuesday.

Terry George, 27, said in a CBC-TV interview that some people were "getting a lost of things mixed up and saying he (the pilot) swerved to miss my truck, which he didn't."

George said he was clearing the runway, about 20 feet off the west side, and was unaware the plane was so close until it passed over his truck.

He said the plane flew over and "about 3,000 feet in front of me . . . all of a sudden he did a real hard left bank. His nose went up. He did half a cartwheel into the ground."

George said he had an estimate on when the flight would arrive "and I was waiting to hear him call inbound which would give me seven minutes to clear the runway."

"He never called inbound that I know of and nothing was said to me on my radio that he was inbound."

The crash killed four of five crew members on board the Boeing 737, including the pilot and co-pilot, and 38 of the 44 passengers.

David White, a Calgary student who walked away from the disaster with only sore abdominal muscles from his seatbelt, said the plane seemed to hit the runway with unusual force.

He said he saw the starboard reverse thrust casing fly off the engine. The plane then lifted off sharply, arced and hit the ground. The tail section was left behind as the rest of the plane shot forward and exploded.

The reverse thrust casing comes into operation on landing — deflecting the jet's exhaust to act as a breaking mechanism.

Transport Canada officials were still sifting through the rubble Tuesday to determine the cause of Canada's sixth worst air disaster.

Four of the seven survivors remained in hospital, two in critical condition. The others were treated in Cranbrook hospital and discharged. All survivors were in the tail section.

Bill Howes, who is heading the crash investigation for the ministry, told a news conference that aircraft tapes of the Boeing 737 crew's conversations and of the crew's communications with the airport were destroyed by the fire.

THEY HAD A DREAM

Bit of Kiwiland Touches Down In Metchosin

JOHN

BETH
. . . trial, error

max low

Dreams can be curious things sometimes.

You have visions of doing or going or maybe of becoming . . . something, and when they are shattered you look for something else.

A year or two ago, John and Beth Dickman, a couple of latter-day Metchosin pioneers, had hopes of moving to New Zealand to live. They planned to buy land and start a nut farm, something quite new to the Down Under nuts.

However, a trip south by Beth and one of their five children revealed that getting into Kiwiland as an immigrant after you've passed the magic age of 40 can be a little tricky to say the least, even if you have the wherewithal (or perhaps only the wherewithmost) to survive.

And so John Dickman, who is retired now after working in logging, for a telephone company and more recently as a nursing orderly in Victoria for 14 years, and his wife decided to stay here instead and build a large solar-heated greenhouse.

Of course, you might say, nodding in an understanding way. Then again, you might say where the hell is the connection!

"It could sound funny," John hesitated, "but we thought if we couldn't go to New Zealand, we'd bring a little bit of New Zealand to us."

Ah, the old Mohammed and the mountain bit. And John explained he meant that by having a large conservatory, which he says is a greenhouse you live in, they would have a softer climate of their own and perhaps a few sub tropical palms to relax under.

When you pop into the smallish house on the stony property on Rocky Point Road, where the Dickmans have lived since 1952, it's easy to see why they need a greenhouse.

There are plants everywhere and you peep between the leaves of a monstrous avacado as you sit and sip mint tea and pour over the architecht's plans, just as they have done for a couple of years.

The whole thing is intriguing: the thought of building something comfortable and extremely livable and heating it with only the rays of the sun.

With the forever rising costs of fuels, of course, solar heat is becoming more interesting to many people but, as Lewis Adamcsak (of Adamson Solar Service) who is helping the Dickmans said, the cost still puts most of them off.

It is expensive. But then, what the Dickmans are building is huge.

The octagon-shaped conservatory is 30 feet in diameter and will have plants winding their way through two floors up to a height of 22 feet at the dome. On the ground floor will be a sauna and a bathing pool, both heated by the sun. An eight-foot by 28-foot link section will join the octagon to the present house, which the addition dwarfs.

The Dickmans reckon the whole thing will cost them between $40,000 and $50,000 but they're quick to point out that it could be done a lot cheaper. They have used only the best materials, sturdy double-layer acrylics, ultra-violet-transmitting plexiglass to aid the ripening process and giant storage tanks to keep the summer sun's warmth until the clouds come along.

The cost was made higher for them also, Beth said, because they had to get along by trial and error and do almost all the research on solar heat themselves.

"Even the people who sold us the plexiglass and the acrylics knew nothing about them," she said. "They just sell them!"

"In Canada you don't get any tax or other incentive breaks, either, for investing in solar heating equipment like you do in the States," John pointed out. "So it's much more expensive up here."

Anyway, for a lifestyle that's going to be vastly different — and a whole lot warmer — they figure the expense is worth it.

Their dreams now are of lettuces growing in mid-winter; of rosy fruit like lemons, oranges, papayas, maybe even avacados, hanging from laden branches; and of a good feeling that comes with being close to nature's greenery — and warm at the same time.

Come back and visit us in April when the work will be finished, the Dickmans invited me. Come back and see it with at least some of the plants in place; with the curious, almost petal-shaped pool completed and (the owners hope) replete with tilapia — fish that eat the algae so you don't have to use chemicals in the water.

Thanks friends, I will. Might even take the opportunity to have my first solar sauna and a dip . . .

. . . Just hope those tilapia are friendly.

Officials Protest Disclosure Move

Objections from senior Saanich officials that they will suffer a drop in morale if required to file disclosure forms showing their assets and land holdings were dismissed Tuesday night by Saanich aldermen.

TREMAYNE
. . . fears for morale

The legislative committee urged council to establish the requirement for staff disclosures in compliance with the Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act of 1974.

Only Ald. Mary Casilio voted against the motion, although Ald. Fred Severson said he is worried about the possible effect on the management staff's esprit de corps.

If council approves the recommendation, the information provided by senior officials will not be available for public scrutiny. It will be open only to the mayor, council and municipal manager.

The committee's action follows a pledge by Mayor Mel Couvelier in his inaugural address last December, and will make Saanich the third Greater Victoria municipality to adopt the practice.

Victoria and Oak Bay already require such disclosure from certain designated officials.

(Saanich, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney all passed resolutions in 1974 not to require disclosures from staff members).

In a memorandum to the mayor, municipal manager Bill Tremayne said department heads dislike the proposal for several reasons, including their belief that it questions the honesty of employees and that disclosure would not stop anyone who was intent on being dishonest.

One view expressed was that the measure would not prove effective unless it is all-encompassing, Tremayne said.

However, he said if the practice is to be instituted the information provided should not be made public.

Ald. John Mika said he found that request incredible because it appears to indicate ignorance of the fact the legislation requires only elected officials' disclosures to be made publicly available.

He also dismissed Tremayne's observation that disclosure will not prove effective unless it is all-encompassing. He said no one is naive enough to believe that such action is a guarantee of honesty.

As for the claim of damage to staff morale, Mika said he is not aware that this has happened in municipalities where disclosure by senior officials is required.

"It might improve the morale of ratepayers to know that this very rudimentary step is being taken," he added.

Couvelier said he believes a previous council's decision not to require staff disclosure was an error in judgment.

He said such safeguards, recognizing the potential problems involving staff access to confidential information or advance knowledge of land matters, should not be construed as any reflection on the integrity or honesty of Saanich staff.

Ald. Dave Paterson questioned whether now is the time to require disclosure by senior officials, in view of what he called rumors of low morale problems in the (municipal) hall.

Following council approval, the matter will be referred to the personnel committee so that it can designate those officials who will be required to file disclosure forms.

Scared Woman Bails Out

A 20-year-old View Royal woman hitch-hiker escaped injury when she jumped out of a moving car Tuesday night to avoid the advances of the driver.

Colwood RCMP said the woman was picked up by a man driving a small grey car near McDonald's drive-in on the Island Highway.

She said the car was not travelling fast when she leaped to the road near Four Mile Hill. The car kept going and was sought by police.

Student Job Plan Snared

For the second year running a union wrench has been thrown into the Young Canada Works Program to create summer jobs for students in Saanich.

Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees informed the municipality Tuesday it will not co-sign application forms for the federal youth employment program while layoffs are occurring in the CUPE local and until union men still seeking employment are recalled.

Larry Newman, president of the local representing about 200 municipal staff, also insisted the municipality pay union rates to all persons hired under the program and that they become dues-paying union members.

The base rate for outside staff would be the laborer's rate of $6.93 an hour, and for inside staff $811 per month.

When the union demanded last year that students receive the union rate, the municipality had to supplement program grants by taking $100,000 from its contingency fund.

The committee instructed staff to continue discussing the question with union representatives, and meanwhile to file applications for the program. The deadline for applications is Friday.

Personnel director Arthur Wilks, who expressed the view that the union proposal might be an initial position, noted that under the union's conditions, playground and recreational leaders would receive a daily rate of $37.43.

This, he said, would represent a 66 per cent increase over the $22.50 they received last year.

Ald. Dave Paterson deplored the union's stand but Ald. John Mika said he is not surprised the union would adopt such a position.

He claimed the union was publicly pilloried in the press last year before it even met with the municipal youth employment committee, and had been the target of potshots by certain aldermen.

"Maybe they have taken the position that this year they are not going to be patsies," he said. "Let's have some discussions first before we start slamming people around publicly."

Skateboard Proposal Supported

Saanich's parks and recreation committee recommended Tuesday night that council approve in principle a proposal by two young entrepreneurs to operate a skateboard attraction in Cedar Hill Park, on parkland leased from the municipality.

But aldermen told one of the applicants, Tim Galavan, the committee recommendation does not imply any commitment to proceed with the lease. It merely allows an opportunity to iron out further details with municipal officials, they explained.

Airline Pact Close

A tentative agreement was reached early today between AirWest Airlines Ltd. and employees who have been on strike since Nov. 13.

Company and Teamsters Union negotiators signed the agreement at 5 a.m. following a lengthy bargaining session.

The major hurdle as the bargaining wound down was the wording of a back-to-work agreement.

A spokesman for the employees said a ratification vote will be held Thursday and the result counted that night.

Company president Norm Gold said if the employees ratify the contract, AirWest will begin calling them back to work Friday morning.

Terms of settlement are not being released but negotiators for both sides are recommending acceptance.

Since the strike began, management personnel have been maintaining partial service on the coastal airline which provides harbor-to-harbor flights from Victoria to Vancouver.

Some runs had to be dropped because of the strike and service on others was reduced.

Involved in the dispute are about 90 AirWest pilots, co-pilots, mechanics and service agents.

Woman Loses Suit Against Hospital

A major civil negligence action brought by a 27-year-old Victoria woman against Royal Jubilee Hospital and others has been dismissed in B.C. Supreme Court.

Theresa Anne Worth became paralysed in both legs after jumping from the second floor roof garden of the hospital's Eric Martin Institute Nov. 2, 1973, when she was 23.

The action was heard in court for almost two weeks in the fall of 1976 before Mr. Justice Kirke Smith who reserved judgment. He handed down his written judgment late Tuesday in Vancouver but the decision had not arrived in Victoria.

Had he not dismissed the action, it was learned, damages would have been assessed at $182,000. This means that if the matter goes to the B.C. Court of Appeal and if that court rules in her favor, damages would be $182,000 without the necessity of a retrial for an assessment of damages.

Worth sued the hospital, psychiatrist Dr. Alexander Stewart, general practitioner Dr. Diane Grant and nurse Peggy Gallimore.

She was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital Oct. 23, 1973, as a result of an overdose of sleeping pills and voluntarily agreed to go to the hospital's psychiatric wing, the EMI. Later, it turned out, she had been committed there because her father had signed papers. Her father, Ernest Worth, a maintenance painter at Royal Jubilee, testified he signed committal papers without realizing what they were.

Court was told she wanted to leave EMI, went down one floor on the elevator and walked on to the roof garden after passing a nursing station. She climbed a fence and jumped 29 feet to the ground. As a result, she became paraplegic.

It was not the first time someone had jumped from the roof garden, court was told.

CNIB Cafe Snub Jolts B.C. Tel

Telephone union officials met today with Canadian National Institute for the Blind representatives in Vancouver in a bid to resolve a union boycott of the cafeteria in the B.C. Tel building on Yates.

The boycott has surprised, angered and puzzled company officials and the members of the CNIB who run the catering service under contract with the company.

Union members here decided to take the action in retaliation against the CNIB for continuing cafeteria operations during the lockout-strike which ended Monday.

A company spokesman said as far as he knows the boycott is an isolated incident.

Manageress Laura Almeida said fewer people are coming in now than even during the dispute.

On Tuesday only about five showed up for meals and four others for coffee, all supervisory personnel. Normally about 200 people use the cafeteria.

What's the staff doing this morning?

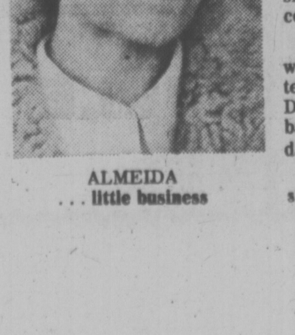
"We're justing cleaning up the place . . . and looking for better days," Miss Almeida said.

Ken Horodyski, public affairs manager for B.C. Tel on Vancouver Island, said local union officials presented the company with a petition Tuesday asking to have the CNIB cafeteria service replaced.

"We told them we had a contract with CNIB and intended to uphold it," Horodyski said. "They said they would take the matter back to their membership and let us know the results. I am surprised, to say the least, they have made a public issue of it."

Horodyski said the union and company mutually agreed there would be no reprisals once the workers returned to their jobs after the 81-day dispute.

"How far can they take this? Why aren't they boycotting B.C. Hydro for supplying us power, the municipality for the water we received or the service stations for providing us with gas?"



ALMEIDA
. . . little business

Bob Mercer, CNIB's executive director, said today in Vancouver he is baffled by the union action.

He said he met with TWU president Bob Donnelly two or three times over the past six weeks to discuss CNIB's contract with B.C. Tel.

The most recent session was two weeks ago. The matter was left unresolved and Donnelly promised to get back to Mercer at a later date.

"I haven't heard from him since," Mercer said.

"From our side we've always been open for discussion and I thought the union was too. I don't understand what the union is trying to do now."

Donnelly was not available for comment.

Mercer said the catering contract with B.C. Tel is CNIB's biggest in the province. Last year's sales province-wide were more than $800,000. All of the proceeds go towards helping the blind.

"Naturally I'm concerned about what's happened," said Mercer. "We wouldn't want to do anything that would put us in an awkward situation when the contract comes up for renewal (later this spring)."

Violinist Debuts In Erudite Program

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A newcomer to Victoria from New York, she is assistant concert mistress of the Victoria Symphony.

Assisted at the piano by Kathleen Solose, she presented a fine and demanding program that came to a highly satisfactory conclusion with a musically erudite and technically accomplished performance by both artists, of the Beethoven "Kreutzer" Sonata.

A slight nervousness was in evidence at the outset, but it was clear as the evening went on the artist took control of the situation and was able to rise easily above the small technical imperfections that affected the opening Tartini Fugue. Her bow is graceful, firm but expressive and used consistently with great finesse and she possesses a particularly flexible and competent left hand. Her tone is warm and sweet but would gain expressively in the long lyrical phrases with a little more breadth to add richness.

Her fine handling of the Beethoven with excellent double-stopping, flying staccato and spiccato passages and well-planned dynamics, was perfectly complemented by the superbly sensitive and quite outstanding partnership of Ms. Solose. Responding to enthusiastic applause from the audience which almost filled the gallery, Eddlemon provided a glowing performance of Ravel's Habanera.

The most unusual work programmed was a world première of American composer David Loeb's Trio for violin and percussion, which the composer had written for the Eddlemons. (Ms. Eddlemon's husband, Scott, is now principal percussionist for the Victoria Symphony.) The third member of the trio was Dale Bassett-Price and the group formed an excellent ensemble in performing the four-movement piece which explores interestingly and with relish and considerable insight, the various and contrasted sonorities and characteristics of the instruments involved.

Rising Star Shows His Talents

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Few people who have never been performers can imagine the world of difference between taking part in a program with other artists and the first experience of being on your own in a full recital.

All young musicians aspiring toward a solo career must come to that trial, a test that will give their audience and themselves a real indication of their professional potential.

Pianist Walter Prossnitz, one of Victoria's best known and most successful young artists, this week was presented in recital by Victoria Musical Art Society at McPherson Playhouse.

He had the additional challenge and encouragement, as well as the responsibility, of a near-capacity audience. Some initial nervousness notwithstanding, he rose to the challenge and scored what may easily be the first of many triumphs on the recital platform.

He opened his program with the Mozart F Major Sonata, K 332, and while there was a certain understandable tension at work, nibbling a little at his customary authoritative style and causing some small moments of insecurity, the refinement of tone, subtlty of coloration and clarity in pedalling were mostly intact and reflected a sensitive musicianship.

PROSSNITZ

With the three movements from Stravinsky's Petrouchka which came next, Prossnitz had all things in hand and performed the vivid and physically demanding music with all the elan that has shown up so remarkably in his various and brilliant festival performances.

His well-developed degree of technical competence, the range and quality of his dynamics with secure octave passages, massive chords that retain resonance and richness of tone, running passages precise and delicate in their embroidery, marked a Chopin group that included the E flat Major Nocturne, G minor Ballade and the A flat Major Polonaise. Chopin's bigger pieces are too frequently treated as little more than show pieces by pianists who turn themselves lose in a paroxysm of high-speed virtuosity.

It was one of the delights of this special evening that this young and enormously promising artist resisted, in the Ballade and the Polonaise, the temptation to over-exploit the technical aspects; and that, while living up to the virtuoso demands satisfactorily, provided tender, thoughtful, sensitively colored passages, keeping all phases in a balanced harmony.

On the program also was the Alban Berg Sonata No.1, a work in one movement the emotional nature and reflective qualities of which were well understood by the pianist.

Prossnitz's great single need now is for musical experience of a catholic and international kind coupled with much study, much listening, much thinking, so that as he himself matures out of his teens, his exceptional artistic gifts and the degree of pianistic skill he has attained will mature to, and possibly even beyond, the indications of his present promise.

All proceeds of the recital will go toward creating a scholarship fund to assist the young artist in studying abroad.

Ocean 'Puddles' Whetting Curiosity

Vagrant puddles of the North Pacific Ocean are an elusive object of study in a new joint research project of the U.S. and Canada.

Scientists from the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay and Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, Calif., are co-operating in the search of 400,000 square miles of largely untravelled, storm-tossed waters mid-way between the Aleutian and Hawaiian islands.

It is hoped to discover more about the interaction of ocean and atmosphere in correlating the movement and position of warmer water with weather changes.

The Anomaly Dynamics Study is part of the joint North Pacific Experiment to examine the cause and nature of warm water anomalies that exist outside of the known ocean currents. Texas A and M University is another U.S. partner in NORPEX.

Dr. John Garrett, head of the IOS offshore oceanography section, and physicist Dr. Mikio Miyake are involved in deployment of sensing equipment and in the processing of data received from self-activating radio transmitters via earth satellite.

The existence of certain bodies of surface water at higher or lower temperatures than the expected ambient levels was discovered five or six years ago, Garrett said.

They were not simply random surface temperature fluctuations, as oceanographic data showed sub-surface variations as well — one or two degrees off the norm.

"They appear as puddles or pools, like oil slicks, of warmer water floating on the surface of colder water," Garrett said. "People began believing in them as organized bodies of water."

The program will look at the area where they have been found together with concurrent weather and oceanographic factors. Two or three extensive oceanographic surveys of the North Pacific have been done, and one survey involving drift buoys continues.

On two occasions, 20 sets of buoys have been set out and followed by remote radio tranmission, the first about 18 months ago. Buoys from that project — an American undertaking — are still washing ashore on the B.C. coast.

The U.S. navy is playing a role in the current work by dropping bathythermographs from patrol aircraft based at Adak, Alaska, every two weeks.

These instruments consist of a floating radio transmitter and a submerged temperature and pressure sensor connected to it.

That phase of the project will continue for at least another year, Garrett said.

Prove It All, Cossitt Told

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Levasseur says MP Tom Cossitt is going to have to back up his charges that Levasseur could have been a double agent in Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's office.

The 39-year-old cable television executive, who was a regional adviser to the prime minister between 1968 and 1970, refused Tuesday to comment on the allegation "because there are a lot of things I could deny . . . but there are a lot of fairy tales in the air."

"They are going to have to back up these charges," Levasseur said. "It's up to them to prove it."

The Progressive Conservative MP told the Commons Monday the alleged double agent was not suspected of having worked for the Soviet Union's KGB, but only of having collaborated with the KGB on instructions from the RCMP.

HOCKEY EXPERTS . . . . . . PRAISE HAWKS

Cats Caught Napping

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

It may be poor consolation for Victoria Cougar supporters, but quite a number of hockey experts seemed to be reading the same script after Tuesday's Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

That game, if you haven't heard, resulted in a 6-2 victory for Portland Winter Hawks. . .over the Cougars.

"One of our best games in a long time," declared Portland manager Brian Shaw.

"Not too many clubs would have beaten Portland tonight," was the comment from Victoria coach Jack Shupe. "It's the best I've seen them play this season."

Barton Bradley, a West Coast resident and one of several professional scouts on hand: "That had to be the best game I've seen Portland play this season. There aren't many teams around that would have beaten them."

But just as the plus marks all belong to Portland, there were some minus marks to be handed out. All to the Cougars. They came out flat, were "not prepared," and the shouting, to all intent and purpose, was over after the first period.

With Wayne Babych leading the way, Portland raced off to a 4-0 lead in the opening period and the Cougars, flubbing a chance to close to within two points of the Western Division leaders, never recovered.

Babych scored three goals in the first period and added two more later in the game to singlehandedly cool the Cougars. Seemingly always in the right place at the right time, the 19-year-old's five-goal performance speaks well for vacations.

Babych, said Shaw, returned to Portland after playing for the Canadian national team in the December junior world tournament but lacked the zip and pep he showed before Christmas. He was sent home to Edmonton for a week's vacation.

"This has to be Wayne's best game since his return," added Shaw.

Babych did indeed put on a show for a crowd of 2,162 fans. In addition to a flock of scouts, the onlookers included Alan Eagleson, president of the National Hockey League Players' Association who is in Victoria for a speaking engagement today, and Rudy Pilous, the one-time Victoria Maple Leaf coach now managing Winnipeg Jets of the World Association.

Eagleson and legal partner Bill Watters are in the business of representing hockey players. It's not likely, however, that they will add Babych to their stable. Shaw also doubles as a player agent and will handle the affairs of Babych and at least six other Hawks when they graduate from junior ranks.

Cougar captain Curt Fraser is reportedly committed to Eagleson. It is ironic. Fraser happened to be Babych's check for most of the night and was on the ice when the Portland winger scored three of his goals and when Max Kostovich counted Portland's other one.

Fraser wasn't the only Victoria winger to suffer some embarassment. Virtually all Cougar wingers experienced miserable games. They were continually out of position, missed their man on checking assignments and didn't skate as well as they did the previous night when the Cougars defeated Billings Bighorns, 8-2.

The one exception on the wing who tried and did manage to stir up some excitement was big Kim Spencer. He scored Victoria's first goal (George Fritz got the other late in the game).

Shupe wouldn't place all the blame on the wingers.

"We weren't prepared for them (the Hawks)," Shupe said in his assessment. "They came out flying and our guys panicked. No doubt that first period beat us. We were taken by surprise.

"When five guys started chasing the puck at once, we were in trouble."

Portland lost its starting goaltender, Jerry Price, in the opening minutes when he took a hard shot by Bill Jobson on the facemask. The shot dented the mask and cut Price on the cheekbone. The groggy netminder, while not seriously hurt, was replaced by Bart Hunter, who turned in a solid performance but also was helped by a steady and alert defence.

The Victoria defence, without any great assistance from the wingers, was pressured into numerous mistakes and didn't give Steve Amiss the protection that Hunter enjoyed.

Despite the loss, Cougars remained in second place although third-place Seattle Breakers closed to within a point of Victoria by playing to a 4-4 draw with Brandon Wheat Kings.

In other games Tuesday, Flin Flon Bombers edged Calgary Wranglers 6-4 and Saskatoon Blades outlasted Medicine Hat Tigers 9-8.

Hockey Dies On Road And Baseball Is Born

Thus spins the never-ending cycle of life: as one team dies on the road another is born at home. It makes a man feel kinda humble.

While Vancouver Canucks were looking for new reasons for their ineptitude — management at least seems to have settled on the mean old media — Vancouver Canadians were being christened in absentia here in town. So far, they're a lot more fun to watch.

In one way, the press conference naming Harry Ornest's brave new Triple A baseball team the Canadians must have been puzzling to Fred Whitacre, the general-manager entrusted with making the operation work. There was a faint but detectable air of cynicism among the collected media, as though there were doubts that the thing would ever fly.

There is a simple explanation. Not many think it will. Ornest knows this. He knew it when he made his pitch to the park board to share the cost of bringing Capilano Stadium back up to pro sport standards. He knows the game has failed here before. Most of all, he knows that this is a sports town with a suicide complex.

The hockey team is and has been unutterably bad. For more than a decade the football team was a national joke — so much so that even after last year's comeback a lot of people are waiting for the other cleat to drop.

When baseball stumbled and died here in 1969 the coroner's verdict was death by neglect — not by management, but by customers. There has been no detectable demand for reincarnation.

The dream — the great pie-inthe-sky carrot to be dangled before the Triple A customers — is major league baseball in a domed stadium. Don't eat that, Elmer, you'll stain your teeth.

But don't get me wrong, Fred. You and your baseball team are indeed most welcome. It's just that the climate here is a little different than what you might have grown used to in Hawaii, where you had the only game in town and set Pacific Coast League records because the people were gung ho.

This is not a gung-ho town. It's a show-me town, and you'll have to show them quickly. When the fans here yell "Go, Canadians. Go!" they're likely to be pointing toward the airport.

Having said that, let me point out that all is not lost. As long as the Canucks continue to flap around in their current fashion you will never be under any heat because there won't be enough left over.

This, you see, is a 12-month hockey town. The season, like Gaul, is divided into three parts: the off-season, in which they're either firing a coach or listing 320 possibilities to be the new one; the beginning-season, which is laced with optimism and has occasionally been known to last through the entire first verse of the opening anthem; and the main-season, in which the team sinks slowly under the Zamboni, the players surfacing only long enough to scream that it isn't their fault.

Let me give you an example:

Going into last night's battle with Washington Capitals, the Canucks had won four (4) of their last 24 games. Naturally, something had to be done. The people responsible had to be stopped.

So the coaching staff hauled in one of the men responsible. The discussion was heated, no punches pulled. The guy was told he was at fault and it was strongly suggested that he start doing his part for the team.

Unfortunately, he wasn't a hockey player. He was Arv Olson, our hockey writer.

He was, he was told, dealing in sensationalism and creating controversy. He was blasted for a headline on these pages — CURTAINS FOR KURTENBACH? — although he didn't write it. (Repeat after me: Reporters do not write headlines. Reporters do not write headlines).

Just before your press conference I phoned Olson in Washington to see if the lash marks had healed. He was well enough to cover another game, proving at least that no one had punched him in the stomach.

The players, he says, are still talking to him. They've had their own meetings and talked things out and decided how they should approach the balance of the season.

This is very important, Fred. Hockey contracts being what they are it's almost impossible to discipline a player. If they don't feel like playing well they don't have to, and anyone who crosses them gets to go out behind the barn with their lawyer.

The other day — you're not gonna believe this, Fred — they said the problem was that they lacked leadership. There was nobody there to give them the old incentive.

They're averaging $90,000 per year. They want incentive, they should maybe spend a week or so driving a truck.

Anyway, Fred, welcome to Vancouver. But if I were you I wouldn't follow through on that promise to leave your number in the phone book. If the number's there, so is the address. The Canadians start out 0-5, the fans might drop over to your home and build you a vacant lot.

And be grateful to the hockey team. It's hockey that gives you a chance.

BERNIE RALLIES TO TAKE TITLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver overcame a 4-2 deficit to count three on the final end and defeat Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna 5-4 Tuesday in the deciding game of the best-of-three British Columbia men's curling final.

The win gave Sparkes a berth in the national championship to be played here March 5-11.

Sparkes trailed 4-2 in the deciding game after Gretzinger stole a single point on the seventh end. Sparkes blanked the eighth and ninth in an effort to build up a big end and the move paid off in the 10th.

With Sparkes counting three, Gretzinger was heavy with his final rock and his shot was swept to the back of the 12-foot line, giving Sparkes the victory.

Earlier Tuesday, Gretzinger made a perfect last rock draw to the button for a 5-4 win over Sparkes which evened the series. Monay's opening game saw Sparkes edge Gretzinger 5-4.

Gretzinger, with Barry Smith at third, Dan Worley at second and Ron Steinhauer at lead, won the Interior title Sunday.

Faith In Flesch Aids Penguins

By Canadian Press

Some people had given up on John Flesch as a National Hockey League player, but Pittsburgh Penguins decided to give him another try at the big time and their faith in him appears may be justified.

Tuesday night, the six-foot-two left winger from Sudbury, Ont., appearing in his eighth game in a Pittsburgh uniform, scored his third goal of the season at 6:44 of the third period to give the Penguins a 2-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks in one of three games.

In other action, Vancouver Canucks downed Washington Capitals 4-2 and New York Islanders nipped Los Angeles Kings, 3-2.

He started out well in the pro ranks scoring 27 goals and 27 assists in 69 games with Omaha of the Central League during the 1973-74 campaign.

During the summer of 1974, Minnesota acquired him from the Flames and the North Stars noted in their 1975-76 media guide "that the talent is there. Time and experience in the NHL are what is needed."

The North Stars decided during that season they had seen enough of Flesch and dispatched him to the American Hockey League. From there Flesch went to the International League where he performed adequately enough and Pittsburgh decided to give him another try last month.

"I've been playing better hockey lately," said Flesch. "The thing (coach) Johnny Wilson has emphasized is that he doesn't want me to get out of position.

"Gene Carr and Rick Kehoe are helping me to be where I should be and as a result, I'm getting some good scoring opportunities."

The latest goal for Flesch, which came on a deflection of Tom Edur's shot from the blue line, marked the third consecutive game in which he has scored the tying or winning goal.

It was enough to end the Black Hawks' 10-game unbeaten streak and it was only the second loss in 16 games for Chicago.

The Canucks, now 15 points behind first-place Chicago in the Smythe Division, snapped a six-game winless streak at Landover, Md.

Canucks defenceman Dennis Kearns assisted on all three first-period Vancouver goals, two of them on the power play. A total of 62 minutes in penalties were called in opening session, including eight majors — four to each club — and a game misconduct to Canucks defenceman Sheldon Kannegeisser.

Claire Alexander, Hilliard Graves and Mike Walton scored for the Canucks in the first period and Chris Oddleifson completed the Vancouver offence at 1:21 of the third.

Bryan Trottier's second goal of the night and 38th of the season gave the Islanders a come-from-behind triumph over the Kings. It moved them three points ahead of Philadelphia.

Bulls Didn't Learn To Avoid Penalties

By Canadian Press

Apparently Birmingham Bulls didn't get the point.

Edmonton Oilers, who had scored three times with the manpower advantage in a 7-0 home-ice shellacking of Birmingham on Sunday night, repeated the lesson Tuesday night with three more power-play goals in a 4-1 decision over the Bulls at the Coliseum.

The victory, Edmonton's fourth in its last six games, moved the Oilers one point ahead of the idle Houston Aeros and into third place in the World Hockey Association. They trail second-place New England Whalers by 10 points and first-place Winnipeg Jets by 12.

In the only other game, New England whipped the slumping Quebec Nordiques, 5-1.

The Bulls, mired in last place for the first couple of months of the season, decided to try and turn things around by adopting a more aggressive style of play. They've escaped from the basement and are currently battling with Cincinnati Stingers — another rough club — for sixth spot.

However, the new-look Bulls have let things get out of hand on a few occasions and several players — even coach Glen Sonmor — have been hit with suspensions.

Serge Beaudoin, one of the rough-and-tumble defencemen with the club, was in the penalty box with consecutive minor penalties in the first period as Blair MacDonald connected for a pair of power-play goals.

Eagle Urges Team of Pros

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson says he will recommend to a Hockey Canada board meeting here Thursday that Canada send a team of professionals to the world hockey championship in Prague April 26-May 14.

"My recommendation will be to enter a team and get on with it," the executive director of the National Hockey League Players' Association told a news conference.

Eagleson, who quit last month as chairman of Hockey Canada's international committee because of what he described as interference from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, called the news conference to introduce Miro Subrt, president and chairman of the world championship.

Subrt expressed hope that the world tourney could be scheduled in future so that Canada could send its best players. He suggested the NHL and World Hockey Association might suspend league play for two weeks in January to allow for the world championship.

Canada's participation in the tournament was thrown into doubt when player representatives Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers and Phil Esposito of New York Rangers said association members might not take part.

They said the players were unwilling to participate under the same circumstances as last year when Jack Devine of the CAHA, and not Eagleson, negotiated their position with the Europeans as the Canadian delegate to the International Ice Hockey Federation.

Champ Taller And Heavier

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Leon Spinks, who was 11 years old when a youthful Muhammad Ali beat an aging Sonny Liston in 1964, fights Ali tonight for the world heavyweight boxing championship in what will be the former U.S. marine's eighth pro fight.

Ali was 22 and in his 20th pro fight when he won the title for the first time with a stunning seventh-round upset of Liston in Miami Beach, Fla.

A victory by the 24-year-old Spinks would be equally stunning. Nevada bookmakers have not established a betting line.

There are some boxing observers, however, who feel Spinks can pull a surprise. They feel his winning combination could be his youth and aggressiveness, combined with Ali's age and the fact he has slipped as a fighter.

Ali's plus factors are his ability to take a punch, his long experience and his size. Ali, who stands six-foot-three — 1½ inches taller than Spinks — will enjoy a four-inch reach advantage and a 27-pound weight advantage.

Ali officially weighed in Tuesday at 224¼, three-quarters of a pound less than when he outpointed hard-punching Earnie Shavers last Sept. 29. Spinks weighed 197¼.

JAPANESE STARS BATTER VIKINGS

It wasn't totally unexpected.

The All-Japan University All-Stars dominated the international exhibition men's volleyball meeting with University of Victoria Vikings on Tuesday night, downing the host club 15-4, 15-4, 15-7 and then coming up with a 15-9 decision in a fourth encounter.

The Japanese team, coached the internaionally-acclaimed Masuru Saito, continues its tour with a series against the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds tonight on the Mainland and then tackle B.C. Olympics on Thursday before heading south to face several American teams.

HILLCREST TAKES TITLE

Hillcrest amassed 319 points to win the Greater Victoria elementary schools championship meet held at the weekend in Crystal Pool.

A combined entry from Glenlyon and St. Margaret's finished second with 280 and was followed by John Stubbs (232), Metchosin (210), Sangster (206), St. Michael's-Norfolk House (181), Torquay (148), Oakland-Willows (135), Unattached (113), Glanford (106), Colwood (101), Frank Hobbs (67), Saanichton (30), Glen Lake (24) and Willway (10).

Rob Coldwell Sparks Leafs

Rob Coldwell hammered in three goals Tuesday night to lead Esquimalt Maple Leafs to a 6-3 victory over Victoria Athletics in South Island Big Six Hockey League play at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Victory boosted Esquimalt's lead over the runner-up Athletics.

Pat Sets Point Pace For Cats

Pam Henderson fired 17 points to lead Alley Cat Boutique to a 57-47 victory over Valkyries in a winners' bracket game of the Victoria Senior Women's Basketball League double-loss elimination playoffs Tuesday night at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Jan Nowell added 13 points for Alley Cats, who led 30-16 at half time. Marg Barber topped Valkyries with 10.

BOWLERS OF WEEK

Bringing list of Times Bowler-of-the-Week winners up to date are two up-Island bowlers, Verna Guymer of Ladysmith and Carl Grzech of Crofton. Verna captured women's fivepin award during 14th week of competition with 312-291-266 — 869 series in Sunday Classic League at Chemainus Bowlarena while Carl collected men's tenpin laurels during 16th week of 15th annual contest with 236-182-248 — 666 series in Wednesday Men's League at Duncan Lanes. Both also earned berths in season-ending Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Spatsizi Change Would Aid Wildlife

OUTDOORS

stewart lang

Establishing a provincial wilderness park doesn't automatically guarantee the integrity of the wildlife resources within its boundaries.

Case in point — Spatsizi.

Spatsizi Park, the second largest in British Columbia at 1.66 million acres, is located about 200 miles north of Smithers.

The park, encompassing an 82,000-acre ecological reserve at Gladys Lake, was set up by the NDP government in 1975 to protect some unique wildlife values, including the Osborne caribou (the largest-bodied species in North America), Stone sheep, moose, mountain goats, grizzly bears and wolves.

Unfortunately, the boundaries were drawn rather hastily and could stand a bit of modification to accomplish the purpose for which the park was created.

Grant Hazelwood, the provincial parks branch biologist, explained a few of the discrepancies during a recent chat in his Victoria office.

Take the northern boundary for example. Instead of following a natural and easily-recognized feature, such as the Stikine River, it carves a highly-artificial route south of the river.

Hazelwood would especially like to see this segment of the boundary changed.

"I see it as a very important thing for us to do in terms of the park, particularly with the Stikine River because of the rafting, canoeing and riverboating possibilities," he explained.

It is now possible to float down the Spatsizi River to the junction with the Stikine and then down the Stikine in relatively easy fashion. One outfitter who Hazelwood described as being very ecologically conscious has made a business of floating part of this route.

Extending the northern boundary of the park to the Stikine River would also partially correct another oversight. It seems that a considerable amount of valuable winter range is now located outside park boundaries. In fact, the entire upper basin of the Stikine provides winter range for the highly-mobile caribou.

And the extension shouldn't encounter any dispute from either the forest service or the mines department. Most of the timber in the area is low-volume in nature and some of the mining claims in same general area have lapsed.

"Some day I hope we will have controlled access so that we can continue to preserve the integrity of the area," said Hazelwood.

Right now, except for the ecological reserve where it's illegal to use combustion motors, there is no controlled access in the park and several of the lakes are large enough for float planes.

Access is also possible along the B.C. Railway bed which was constructed along the western boundary of the park. In fact, the hunting activites of some of the railway workers — possibly compounded with wolf pressure and some hard winters — have taken a toll among some specific big game herds on that side of the park.

Hunting is permitted in Spatsizi and it's sister park immediately to the south — Tatlatui.

A mining road, which was being pushed in from the Ominecas toward the southeastern part of the park, recently caused concern among environmentalists, who feared its projected path could cut through Lawyer's Pass. Besides allowing more uncontrolled access, the road would pass through a major caribou rutting area — with unknown consequences.

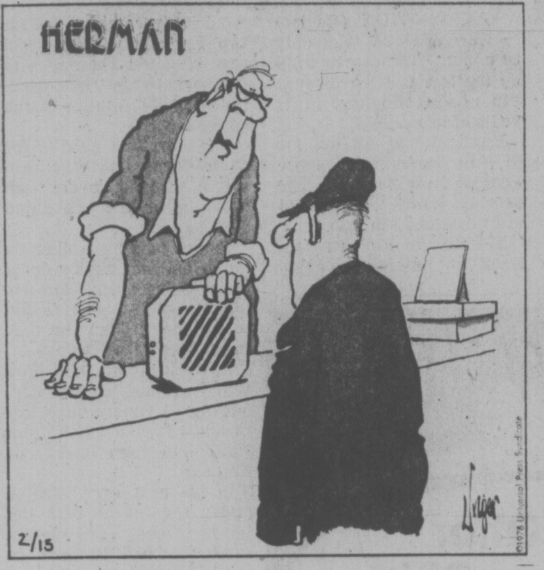
A check with the mines department by this writer revealed that construction on the road has been halted. But, judging by past performances, that could only be a temporary situation.

The possiblility of uncontrolled access could also have a detrimental affect on fisheries values in the park. The cold northern waters don't permit fish to grow very fast and larger numbers of fishermen could harm the resource before restrictions could be imposed.

To further complicate matters, a B.C. Hydro proposal for a dam at Stikine Canyon would back the waters up into the extended park boundaries.

"It's beautiful country," said Hazelwood. "But it's very unforgiving country, too. Even in the summer months — every month of the year — it can snow up there."

This writer hopes any parks branch proposal to extend or modify the boundaries of the park won't receive as chilly a reception.



"If the smoke detector fails and your house burns down, we replace the unit plus batteries free of charge."

Selection of Black Called 'Tokenism'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The black college sophomore added to South Africa's Davis Cup team says he has been called a "token" before and the taunts don't hurt as much this time.

"I was called all sorts of names three years ago," Peter Lamb, a Vanderbilt University student, said in an interview in his college dormitory.

Lamb said that in 1975 he became the first black to play in international junior tennis competition for segregationist South Africa.

"It hurt much more then because I was younger and the insults were coming from South Africans. When it comes from people of your own nationality, it is bound to hurt more."

Lamb, who will celebrate his 19th birthday the week before South Africa squares off against the United States March 17-19 in a preliminary Davis Cup round at Vanderbilt, looked anything but hurt Monday as he lounged before a television set with friends. The group watched reports of the latest controversies swirling about the contest.

With civil rights groups threatening to protest the games because of South Africa's racial policies, it was announced on Sunday that Lamb, whose home is Cape Town, would be the first black member of a South African Davis Cup team.

The reaction from black leaders came swiftly.

"At best it's tokenism," said Charles Kimbrough, president of the Nashville branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "It's an insult to black people and it should be an insult to Peter Lamb."

Fisk University president Walter Leonard said, "It's tokenism, it's window-dressing, it's subterfuge."

Told of the remarks, a calm and self-assured Lamb said, "I don't care what they say. It's not going to change my mind."

LIVERPOOL GAINS LEAGUE CUP FINAL

LONDON (Reuter) — Liverpool, soccer's English League champion, held out against pressure from Arsenal Tuesday to salvage a scoreless draw that sent the team into the final of the League Cup.

Liverpool won the home-and-away semi-final by an aggregate of 2-1, the score by which the club defeated its London rival in the first leg at Liverpool.

Liverpool, in the final of the League Cup for the first time, will meet either Nottingham Forest or Leeds United in the Wembley Stadium final on March 18. Forest and United were due to play their second leg match today with Notts Forest leading 3-1.

Eight league matches scheduled Tuesday were postponed because of frozen pitches.

Kiwi Fast Bowler Destroys England

WELLINGTON (Reuter) — New Zealand took only 50 minutes Tuesday to wrap up the last test for its first win against England in 47 years of test cricket.

England was all out for 64 — its lowest-ever score against New Zealand. The previous lowest total was 181 at Christchurch in 1930.

Fast bowler Richard Hadlee of New Zealand was again the destroyer, taking the last two England wickets when play resumed Tuesday with England at 53 for eight, needing 84 runs to win the match on the last day.

The start was delayed for 40 minutes by light rain which stopped several minutes after the scheduled starting time.

Hadlee took his wickets in the seventh and ninth overs of the morning to give him six for 26 from 13.3 overs to add to the four wickets he took in England's first innings.

Phil Edmonds and Bob Willis started confidently, adding 10 runs before Edmonds edged a catch from Hadlee to John Parker at first slip.

In his next over, Hadlee ended the match with the third ball when Willis edged a catch to Geoff Howarth at third slip.

Sounder Defender Signs Long Pact

SEATTLE (AP) — Defender Bruce Rudroff has signed a three-year contract with Seattle Sounders, the North American Soccer League team has announced.

Rudroff, 22, saw action in nine games for Seattle last season. He is a former all-America defender at St. Louis University.

'Dictator on an Ego Trip'

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs owner Harold Ballard, facing stiff fines for failing to put players' names on his club's road sweaters, has called National Hockey League president John Ziegler a "dictator on an ego trip."

Ballard's remarks Tuesday came 24 hours after he received a letter from Ziegler, demanding that Leafs players begin wearing surnames on the back of their road jerseys. Fines for failure to comply were to go into effect with Monday night's game in Buffalo against the Sabres.

Ziegler's directive said fines would be $2,000 Monday, $3,000 for the Leafs' next road game Feb. 26 in Chicago and so on until they reach $5,000 a game.

"Who does this man think he is?" Ballard said. "He's a rookie president. We should send him to the minors.

"I'm wondering what we have here. This guy is working for us. We're not working for him. He's a president, not a commissioner, but he's starting to act like a dictator.

"Technically speaking, names on sweaters are a property right. I don't have to put names on the shirts. I sent Ziegler a wire saying he had a lot of nerve doing business this way. I told him that I thought he had a lot more sense than that."

Ziegler was controlled in his response.

"What Mr. Ballard thinks of me is immaterial," Ziegler said. "The governors made an agreement and he must live up to it. He said he would put names on sweaters for all road games this year and if the rule was still in effect next year, he would put them on sweaters for home and away games."

It's Vancouver Canadians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry Ornest announced Tuesday an affiliation with Oakland A's of the American League for his new Vancouver baseball franchise in the Pacific Coast League.

The Beverley Hills, Calif., promoter told a news conference that the Vancouver team would be named the Canadians and he would be "proud to see the name when Vancouver plays in United States cities this season."

Vancouver, after an eight-year absence, will be back in the PCL in 1978, playing in a refurbished stadium seating more than 7,000.

"I've had a love affair with baseball since I was six years old," said Ornest, team owner and president, "and it's all been worth it.

"Baseball is entering a new and marvellous era and I think this is the first step in Vancouver getting a major-league franchise."

Vancouver dropped out of the PCL after the 1969 season following a disastrous year at the gate when fewer than 60,000 customers attended 70 home games. The team, called the Mounties, was stocked with players from expansion teams in Montreal and Seattle.

Capilano Stadium, owned by the city, is being upgraded to PCL standards and Ornest said new lighting poles would be ready for the Canadians' home-opener April 26 against San Jose Missions. Vancouver begins the regular-season schedule April 14 in Hawaii against the Islanders.

Ornest became owner of the Vancouver franchise last month and his brother Leo has taken over as owner in Portland, Ore., as the PCL expands to 10 teams from eight for the 1978 season.

Parkland Girls Wrap Up Berth

Parkland Panthers locked up first place in the "B" Division with a 77-16 victory over Dunsmuir in schedule-ending games Tuesday night in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Basketball League.

In other games, Mt. Douglas Ramblers finished second in the "B" Division with a 54-26 win over Oak Bay and Spectrum nipped Nanaimo 56-54 in an up-Island exhibition contest.

Panthers finished with an 11-2 record and Ramblers were 10-3.

Reynolds Roadrunners had previously topped the "A" Division with an unblemished 13-0 record.

The Lower Island tournament opens at 4 p.m. Thursday at Victoria High, continues beginning at 4 p.m. Friday at Mt. Douglas and concludes Saturday beginning at 5 p.m. at Reynolds. The final is scheduled for 8 p.m.

The top five teams from the tourney advance to the Island tournament at Courtenay, Feb. 23-25.

In boys' league games Tuesday, Oak Bay Bays boosted its record to 9-0 with a 94-64 decision over Mt. Douglas, Reynolds edged Claremont 45-42 and Parkland bulldozed Stelly's Stingers 86-41 in an exhibition.

Ken Kirzinger led Bays with 30 points while Wayne Andrews and Kelly Dukeshire added 20 each. Jeff Warren set the pace for Mt. Doug with 18.

DORIS CARRIES ON

NEW WESTMINSTER — Doris Bueckert's Prince George foursome remained unbeaten after the third and fourth rounds of play in the British Columbia senior women's curling playdowns here Tuesday.

Bueckert defeated Carol Trueman of Vancouver 10-5 in the third round and then went on to down Shirley MacDonald of Dawson Creek 11-6 in the afternoon.

Trueman, who was unbeaten until she met Bueckert, edged Elin Petch of Victoria 8-7 in the afternoon after the Victoria rink dropped a 14-8 decision to Madeline Copeland of Quesnell earlier in the day.

Three rinks — Betty Stott of White Rock, Marg Rosse of Rossland and MacDonald — are tied for third place with 2-2 records while Petch and Copeland trail at 1-3.

Empty Porkbarrel

LANSING, Mich. (Reuter) — Contrary to popular belief, military spending costs more jobs than it creates, say a report released Monday by Michigan's Public Interest Research Group.

The report estimated that every $1 billion spent on defence results in the loss of about 11,600 jobs that might have been created if the money had been spent in other areas.

The 11-page report, entitled The Empty Porkbarrel: Unemployment and the Pentagon Budget, estimated that almost four million jobs were lost because of military spending in the period 1970-74.

"This country has long believed that military spending is good for the economy," said Marion Anderson, author of the report. "Not only is military spending bad for the economy, but its negative impact is accelerating."

She said an analysis two years ago showed that each $1 billion going for defence cost the economy 10,500 jobs, while the figure now has risen to 11,600 jobs.

Miss Anderson said military spending creates fewer jobs than spending in other areas because defence spending is capital intensive, requiring investment in production equipment and expensive materials.

'Beat Your Wife'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The billboards blazed Beat Your Wife in huge letters. In smaller letters, the signs added, Go Bowling.

The Bowling Proprietors Association was trying to catch the eyes of potential bowlers. But, what it generated instead was a controversy with the Spouse Abuse Centre, which provides shelter and counselling for victims of abuse.

Carole Morse, director of the centre at a YWCA, said that when she saw the billboard, "I almost cracked up my car.

"This is just the sort of humor we have to stop," she said. "I think it is just the kind of mentality that makes this (wife abuse) the largest unreported crime."

L. A. (Sonny) Frantz, president of the bowling association, said, "This has been our first exerience with billboards, and it might be our last.

"We meant 'beat' in the competitive sense," he said. "It means take her up to the bowling lanes and show her who's boss."

To appease the protesters, Frantz said sign painters will go from billboard to billboard, crossing out the word Wife and scrawling the word Husband in its place.

Driver's Licence for Skateboard

LONDON (Reuter) — From its humble beginnings in California in the 1960s, the skateboard has rapidly spread all over the world.

Now it is big business. Boards, costing up to $140, are more sophisticated, with some measuring seven feet long and powered by sail or motor.

West Germany has designed the motorized skateboard and a driving licence is required for its use.

Despite the expense, risk of injury and lack of facilities, the sport is enjoying an unprecedented boom.

Britain has an estimated three to four million school-age enthusiasts, and about $57 million was spent last Christmas on boards and safety equipment.

Britain's government-funded Sports Council has persuaded municipalities to convert parking lots, wasteland and unused swimming pools into skateboard parks and one will be built in Plymouth, for about $190,000, on the site of a former zoo.

In the United States, skateboards are a multi-million-dollar industry — not including hospital costs.

A recently completed survey estimated that two of every five skateboarders are injured in the U.S. and last year 24 deaths occurred.

In Australia, the boom died abruptly about two years ago when three children died in skateboard accidents within a month.

The craze has caught on in Hong Kong, though elsewhere in Southeast Asia it has made little impact.

In Japan, the sport has gained wide popularity over the last three years among an estimated 800,000 people. Japan holds annual national championships for both men and women in slalom, giant slalom and freestyle events.

In South Africa, skateboarding has mushroomed over the last two years and the country claims the world skateboard speed record.

Eric Clark, a 14-year-old Johannesburg schoolboy, was clocked at 66.5 miles per hour.

In France the sport has become so popular that it led to bitter controversy between the French federations for surfing, skiing and roller skating over who should run it when the ministry of sport designated skateboarding a recognized sport.

The craze has led to a high number of spills, none more spectacular than that of 42-year-old Jean-Pierre Marchand during an attempt on the world speed record.

His skateboard developed a wobble after he released his grip on the car he was using as a launch pad at 65 m.p.h., taking a spectacular flying leap followed by half a dozen cartwheels. Marchand was saved from serious injury by his protective equipment.

Roof Sign Tells It All

ASHKHABAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — On a dusty street in the Soviet desert republic of Turkmenistan, a building decorated with Arab-style mosaics carries a large sign in Russian on its roof.

Looking out over streets filled with men and women in their flowing, centuries-old national costume, the sign proclaims: "Glory to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

The sign symbolizes the changes that have come to Turkmenistan, a former feudal khanate bordering on Iran and Afghanistan that was welded into the Soviet Union after the 1917 Bolshevik revolution.

Turkmenistan would be a challenge for any country to develop. It is slightly bigger than France or California but has only 2.6 million people. It is 80 per cent desert, bakes in summer temperatures of 122 degrees and is prone to earthquakes.

Under such circumstances, progress has been slow. But Soviet and Turkmen officials are proud of what has been accomplished.

They say that while only seven Turkmenians out of 1,000 could read and write before the revolution, almost everyone is literate now. The number of schools has risen from 58 to 1,648 and hospital beds from 277 to 25,000. Life expectancy is up from 35 years to 70, and industry and agriculture have grown.

However, while Turkmenistan's natural gas industry is pumping 20 per cent of all the gas needed by the Soviet Union, there are still cases in rural villages of girls being sold to prospective husbands.

While hospitals and clinics expand across the republic, some people still consult traditional medicine men.

The campaign against the Moslem religion, and particularly its social code, is continuing. But there is still official concern that the religion could rise in Turkmenia again.

The early Communist rulers stressed the development of industry and agriculture as well as keeping constant pressure on Moslem customs. They organized ritual burnings of women's veils.

Judge Doubts Inmate Complaint Tally

VANCOUVER (CP) — Brian Kent, director of inspections and standards for the British Columbia Corrections Branch, Monday told a royal commission inquiring into conditions at women's prisons that his office received only five complaints in four years from women at the nearby Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla).

Kent, whose division was created in 1973 to inspect prisons and investigate complaints, told the inquiry that there were 253 complaints from the men's unit of Oakalla in the last four years.

Inquiry commissioner Justice Patricia Proudfoot said she thought there probably were more than five complaints from the women's unit.

Kent said reports of injuries received within institutions are supposed to be forwarded to him. He told the inquiry he had not received any reports of slashing within the last two months.

Patricia Drew, local director of Twin Maples, a minimum security unit about 75 kilometres east of Vancouver which houses about 22 prisoners, told the inquiry there were 187 admissions to the unit last year and 32 escapes.

John Allen, director of corrections in the North Fraser region, said escapes are a risk Twin Maples is prepared to take in order to receive and help more women. Allen said he did not view the ratio of one in six as high.

Drew said most of the escapers are women who have arrived that day at Twin Maples and haven't given the place a chance. When a woman who has been there awhile escapes she often telephones, wanting to return, Drew said.

She said Twin Maples offers temporary absences, allowing women to get out in the community. It is situated in the country, the women are not strictly confined, and there is scope for outdoor work, she said.

She added that of 365 temporary absences granted last year there were only three women who didn't return.

Drew said she did not agree with keeping community assessment reports, prepared by probation officers, from the prisoner. The probation officers are afraid they would lose their sources if the information were revealed to the inmates, she said.

Community assessment reports are used in determining a person's elegibility for temporary absence.

Sometimes it is a member of the inmate's family, husband or mother, who asks that the prisoner not be released to their custody, while telling the prisoner something different, Drew said.

ONLY SOBER GET JAIL PASS

BURNABY (CP) — Only punctual, sober weekend prisoners are receiving temporary absence passes to give them Saturday and Sunday off from the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla), corrections director Ted Harrison said Tuesday.

Harrison, director for the Vancouver region, was commenting on reports that prisoners sentenced to serve their terms on weekends were being turned away even then because of overcrowding.

Last weekend, 42 prisoners got temporary absence permits, knocking two days off their terms even though they spent only a few minutes in custody. Two weekends ago, 35 received absence permits.

Harrison said all intermittent prisoners are required to serve the first several weekends in custody, adding that temporary absence permits don't go to those who show up late, intoxicated or drugged for their first few weekends.

The weekday prisoner population is about 700, he said, about 130 above capacity. About 110 offenders are currently serving intermittent terms.

"It leaves us with no choice but to take the pressure off" by issuing temporary absence passes to some of those serving weekend sentences, Harrison said.

UIC IS TOO TARDY SAYS VANDER ZALM

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Delays in processing unemployment insurance claims are forcing an increasing number of eligible claimants in British Columbia to seek welfare, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

"Our intention is to go to Ottawa and to work out with Bud Cullen, the minister responsible, a more realistic approach to those people who are waiting for unemployment insurance," said Vander Zalm.

Vander Zalm, on a tour-day tour of welfare offices in the Interior, said he had found persons turned to welfare because of the bureaucracy which exists in the federal Unemployment Insurance Program.

"More and more people eligible for UIC are applying to welfare offices because they can't get anywhere with the commission," he said.

2 B.C. MPs Disagree

OTTAWA (CP) — Two West Coast MPs disagreed on the state of preparedness to handle oil spills in the Vancouver area Tuesday night.

Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock) said in the Commons there is no adequate contingency plan to deal with a spill.

He mentioned reports that said there is inadequate communication between various agencies that deal with spills, the defence department is not included in any plans, there is no planning for spills in high risk areas, and there was equipment available but no person in the West had to right to order it to be used.

Hugh Anderson (L—Comox-Alberni), parliamentary secretary to Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc, said the federal departments concerned have adequate plans. Oil companies also had good plans to deal with spills that came under their responsibility.

The weakness across the country was that some municipalities and provinces had no contingency plans.

3 Plead Not Guilty Of Theft

VANCOUVER (CP) — Francis D. Trebell, Robert L. Dolan and Columbia Western Management Ltd. pleaded not guilty Tuesday to 29 charges of fraudulent conversion and theft at the conclusion of a lenghty jury selection process.

Trebell, Columbia Western Management Ltd. (formerly Yorkshire Financial Corp. Ltd.) and Dolan are charged with 29 counts alleging fraudulent conversion and theft during 1973, 1974 and 1975 in Vancouver, Calgary and Montreal.

The lengthy indictment read to the jury of six men and six women lists allegations that the accused converted money of Natural Resources Growth Fund and other funds, to the use of Yorkshire Financial Corporation and other companies. One count in the indictment alleges Trebell owned and controlled Yorkshire Investment.

The trial, Justice S. M. Toy told the jury, could last three months.

Tuesday's jury selection saw semi-private conferences between the accused and defence lawyers during the formal selection process, in which the accused assisted them in deciding whether to approve a juror called up to be sworn in. The decision is normally made by the lawyer on behalf of his client.

GVRD Split Suggested

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Jack Volrich suggested Monday that the Greater Vancouver Regional District would get more done if it were split into two regional districts.

"We've had a hard time in the past getting the other municipalities such as Surrey and Delta to agree with us," Volrich told a news conference.

"We are not able to keep everyone happy if we have the 17 municipalities that we now have in the GVRD," he said.

The main problem with establishing a transit system in the GVRD is the inability to get a consensus from district municipalities on what should be done first, he said.

The GVRD includes 14 municipalities and three rural unorganized areas.

Building Firms Face Critical Contract Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — The most critical contract talks in British Columbia this year will take place in the construction industry, says a report released Tuesday by the Employers' Council of B.C.

The report, released by council president Bill Hamilton, noted construction agreements will expire April 30 and cover 30,000 workers.

"Much of the climate for the remainder of the year will be determined by whether or not a peaceful and economically sound settlement can be achieved in this industry," the study says.

It says bargaining in the 400 collective agreements to be negotiated this year will take place in a general economic background of moderate growth but with high unemployment, continuing inflation, poor international markets and possible unrealistic expectations.

"Collective agreements in 1978 must reflect the reality of our economic situation," said Hamilton. "Caution is the byword in collective bargaining as we exit from (federal anti-inflation) controls."

The study notes that there was a downward trend in negotiated wage settlements during the last three years and expects this to continue through 1978.

Negotiated settlements in B.C. during the first nine months of 1977 produced average annual wage increases of 6.7 per cent, down from 11.2 per cent in 1976 and 16.4 per cent in 1975.

"It will not be easy to continue the downward trend," said Hamilton, who anticipates considerable tension between labor and management.

Hamilton said it may be unrealistic to expect a repeat of the 1977 man-days lost — a 69-per-cent decline from 1976 — but he still expects the 1978 figure to be substantially below B.C.'s five-year historical record.

He said that because the Anti-Inflation Board based its ruling on total compensation, it has made managers more aware of the cost of fringe benefits.

He called on these managers to continue this awareness because it can now be shown that fringe benefits such as pensions, insurance and premiums account for more than 30 per cent of the gross annual payroll.

RICHMOND WANTS A SHARE

RICHMOND (CP) — This municipality has filed a claim in British Columbia Supreme Court for any unclaimed portion of $3 million worth of jewels, cash and gold seized at Vancouver International Airport in January, 1977.

The claim arises from the seizure Jan. 9 of valuables in suitcases carried by three men who were about to board a CP Air flight to Toronto and Montreal.

It was later discovered that the money and valuables were from the Vancouver Safety Deposit Vaults where 1,200 safety deposit boxes had been looted.

Four men pleaded guilty to possessing stolen property and were sentenced Nov. 9, 1977, to prison terms ranging from five years to eight years.

By last Friday, the deadline for filing claims, more than 350 people had filed statutory declarations in supreme court claiming an interest in the property.

Hearings to determine ownership will commence March 13.

Mercury Increase Sought

SQUAMISH (GP) — The general manager of a chemical plant here Tuesday confirmed his company has notified federal authorities it wants to increase its mercury discharge into Howe Sound even though the sound is closed to fishing because of earlier pollution.

Joe Kass, general manager of FMC Canada Ltd., said a final decision on the planned 30 per cent plant expansion is up to the company's head office in Philadelphia. The plant is situated in this town at the head of the sound 90 kilometres north of Vancouver.

"The environmental costs will be one consideration," Kass said. "That's why we informed the federal and provincial agencies before our official announcement."

Kass said the chlor-alkali plant is "considered a model plant in terms of mercury discharge."

A federal study of the sound's water shows that long-lived species of fish still contain levels of mercury that make them unfit for human consumption. Most of the mercury was discharged when the plant was unregulated during the 1960s.

Although FMC promises not to increase the percentage of mercury released in discharged liquids, the total amount would still increase if the volume of discharge is increased, said Bill Weldon of the provincial Pollution Control Branch.

Mak Ito, a spokesman for the federal Environmental Protection Service, said "Howe Sound cannot absorb any more mercury."

"The company's initial proposal may be referring to federal regulations, which specify mercury per ton of chlorine, but we're going to hold them to no additional discharge whatsoever."

190-m.p.h. Transit

TOKYO (AP) — Japan Air Lines reported achieving a speed of 304 kilometres (190 miles) an hour today in a test of a quiet, pollution-free vehicle it hopes some day will carry passengers between airports and city centres. The high-speed surface transport has no wheels, but floats less than an inch above its track, held up by magnetic power.

Tax Assessment Cut

Oak Bay Manor, a privately-owned luxury home for the elderly, won a reduction in its taxable assessment in an appeal to the court of revision Tuesday.

The assessor had placed the manor in the category of residence, making it liable for an assessment of 25 per cent of its market value of $3 million.

A spokesman for the manor argued the building should be considered an apartment and the taxable assessment should be at the apartment rate of 15 per cent of market value.

The court of revision agreed to roll back the assessment level to 15 per cent for 254 of the 272 rooms in the manor.

The other 18 rooms, used for short-term rehabilitation of alcoholics, will be assessed at the full 25 per cent rate.

The court was told the manor is partly like a nursing home and partly a long-term residential hotel, making definition difficult.

A spokesman for the manor said the building is being used only to about 50 per cent of its capacity of 450 people, with 70 permanent guests and 108 personal-care patients.

In addition there are 26 drug or alcohol patients attending courses on a one-month basis. The alcholism centre is operated inside the manor by the provincial ministry of health.

In a separate hearing, the court of revision increased the assessment on Dorchester Apartments, 1370 Beach Drive.

Assessment had been $349,700 for land and $10,900 for improvements, a total of $360,600, but this was increased to $420,625 for land and nil for improvements. Lawyer Ken Murphy, representing Oak Bay, had appealed the original assessment by the provincial assessing authority, arguing it should be higher for both land and building.

The court of revision, after hearing arguments from both sides, reduced the assessement on the buiilding to nil but sharply increased the assessment on the land.

Steam Cloud Marks Swimmers

MOSCOW (AP) — Every winter day in the heart of downtown Moscow, thousands of men and women disappear into a giant cloud of steam that appears to rise out of the earth just two blocks from the Kremlin.

The steam pours from the surface of a lavish outdoor circular swimming pool that has become a habit for 10,000 people a day. Unconcerned by the staggering heating costs, the city fathers keep the pool, 38 metres across, heated to 27 C whatever the winter weather and invite the whole city in for a plunge.

Robust men and women are everywhere, navigating through the vapor, diving from a high platform and leaping out for dives into nearby snowdrifts.

The pool also operates in the spring and summer. But since its popularity is greatest in the winter its annual 90-day shutdown for repair work takes place during the year's hottest months.

Pool director Sergei Butkevich, formerly a champion swimmer for the Soviet Union, said there is nothing unhealthy about swimming around in the midst of winter.

"People feel better when they're swimming in the open air and breathing freely," Butkevich insisted. "The children who swim here are almost 100 per cent healthy. When we had the flu epidemic this winter, they didn't get it. These kids are hardened by now."

The pool also has an oldtimers' club, with members ranging up to 80 years in age.

An admission charge of 60 kopeks, the equivalent of 85 cents, brings the right to swim in the pool for one hour and to borrow the rubber swimming caps that men and women are required to wear.

Butkevich, who has run the pool for eight years and takes a daily half-hour plunge himself, said the pool sells three million admission tickets a year. Despite an astronomic heating bill, he said, the pool makes a profit equal to $560,000 a year for the Moscow city government.

Post Buys Everett Paper

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post Co. has acquired the Everett Herald in Everett, Wash., it was announced Tuesday. Purchase price was not disclosed.

The Herald has a daily circulation of about 53,000, primarily in Everett, 30 miles north of Seattle and southwestern Snohomish County. Robert Best will remain as president and publisher.

ARMADILLOS HELP DEFEAT LEPROSY

LONDON (Reuter) — British doctors seeking a vaccine to counter leprosy believe that with the help of 40 armadillos, they may find a cure for the disease which affects about 15 million people, a medical researcher said Tuesday.

Dr. Richard Rees, who heads the Leprosy Research Centre at the National Institute of Medical Research, said a vaccine prepared from bacteria taken from the armadillos was effective in preventing leprosy in mice.

He said that the first human trials of the vaccine may begin in two or three years.

The World Health Organization (WHO) started the special project three years ago after U.S. studies showed that armadillos — hard-shelled mammals from South America — can contract leprosy.

NUN SUSPECTED OF 10 MURDERS

DENDERMONDE, Belgium (AP) — A nun from a nursing order is suspected of killing up to 10 elderly patients to get their belongings and sell them to support her morphine habit, police said today.

Cecile Blombeek, 44, known as Sister Godfrida in the Apostolic Order of the Holy Joseph, was arrested last week on theft, drug and forgery charges, police said.

They said she became addicted to morphine eight years ago following surgery for a brain tumor, and that she was dismissed as matron of a geriatric ward at a clinic last year and sent to a private clinic for detoxification.

Authorities said they have ordered the disinterment of the bodies of 10 of Sister Godfrida's patients who died between January and August 1977.

FUNDS SOUGHT TO MOVE GATE

LONDON (Reuter) — Sponsors of an Anglo-U.S. plan to restore the ancient gateway to London's financial and legal districts announced Monday they will raise funds for the project in Canada and six other countries countries with links to the British legal system.

Chicago lawyer Charles Bane, heading the U.S. side of the effort, said the aim is to move the gate, called Temple Bar, from where it stands derelict outside London to a site close to St. Paul's Cathedral.

The ornate archway was erected after the Great Fire of London in 1666 and regarded as a work of the architect Christopher Wren.

Bane, chairman of the American Foundation for Temple Bar, said at a luncheon that restoring the archway gives the English-speaking world a golden opportunity to honor vital principles of Western democracy as enshrined in the Common Law.

U.S. citizens already have donated $100,000 to the million-dollar effort and more money is being sought in 30 U.S. cities. In addition to Canada, fund-rasing campaigns be launched in Australia, Fiji, India, New Zealand, Nigeria and South Africa, Bane said.

For generations, the archway was the site where British monarchs received ceremonial permission to enter the City of London, now the financial district. It also marked the boundary between the City of London and the Royal City of Westminster, both now part of Greater London.

Riot or Battlefield Only Places More Perilous than Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Only a battlefield or a riot are more violent than the American home, according to a national survey of household violence presented to a House of Representatives subcommittee Tuesday.

Child abuse, wife and husband beating, sexual assault and sibling violence—all within the "haven of love and mutual support" of the family—were described by three witnesses at the opening of three days of hearings on family violence.

"Violence occurs between family members more often than it occurs in any other setting except with armies in war and police during riots," testified Murray Straus of the University of New Hampshire, who directed what he said was the only national study of violence in American families.

He said the study found:

● "An astounding range and severity of violence toward children by their parents" that includes 1.2 million children aged 3-17 whose parents at some time in their lives had attacked them with a lethal weapon.

● More than 1.8 million wives are beaten annually by their husbands, typically at least twice.

● 2.3 million children had used a knife or gun on a brother or sister.

He said a San Diego treatment project sponsored by the centre concluded in many cases of family violence the victim is whatever family member happens to be available.

Saleem Shah, chief of a National Institute of Mental Health crime and delinquency unit, said as many as 2,000 of the 20,000 homicides annually in the United States involve husbands and wives.

"We normally consider the family a haven of love and mutual support . . . against the rigors of the outside world," said Congressman James Scheuer, chairman of the subcommittee on domestic and international scientific planning, analysis and co-operation.

"Out there they are gunning for us. At least in the family it's all for one and one for all," said Scheuer, questioning Shah on why there is so much violence in the presumably safe setting of the family.

Shah replied that research has "shattered a myth" that the family is a bastion of safety against the outside world.

'Not My Daughter'

CHICAGO (AP) — The handmade valentine six-year-old Dorothy Cory brought home from school read: "To Daddy."

But when she presented it to her stepfather, James Judy, 32, police said he shouted: "You're not my daughter."

Then he punched her several times, reached for a hand sickle and began swinging wildly, police said.

Hospital attendants said Dorothy was in good condition today. She suffered cuts on the chest and bruises on her face.

Gunman Gives Himself Up

DIDSBURY, Alta. (CP) — A 22-year-old Calgary man who kept police at bay outside a mobile home in this central Alberta community for 26 hours surrendered peacefully to RCMP Tuesday.

Supt. Stuart Ramage, officer commanding the Red Deer RCMP detachment, said the man was unarmed when he left the mobile home in which he had barricaded himself. The man was armed with two rifles during the incident.

Satellite Curbs Adequate: Soviet

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — A top Soviet scientist Tuesday opposed any curbs on the use of nuclear-powered space satellites and said existing agreements already covered the question of compensation for any damage caused.

Referring to the Soviet Cosmos-954 satellite, which disintegrated over Canada's Northwest Territories last month, Evgeniy Fedorov of the Soviet Academy of Sciences declared: "The use of any machinery involves some danger and some risk."

He said that risk that something might go wrong should not stop anyone from attempting to achieve scientific progress, "and such progress I think would require the use of nuclear energy sources on spacecraft."

Addressing a subcommittee of the UN committee on the peaceful uses of outer space, he referred to proposals for special regulations to cover the launch of satellites carrying nuclear power sources, such as Cosmos-954.

"Such requirements are already established," he said, "namely that the country launching the spacecraft which, as a result of malfunctioning, damages another country, has to compensate for the damage caused."

Canada and several of the space committee members have proposed drawing up rules to curb or ban the use of nuclear power sources aboard spacecraft because of the possible radiation hazard in the event of malfunction. U.S. President Carter made a similar suggestion at a news conference Jan. 31.

Fedorov, in citing existing agreements dealing with compensation, seemed to suggest that Canada might receive damages for last month's incident, although he did not say so flatly.

Defence Minister Barney Danson told the House of Commons in Ottawa earlier Tuesday that more than $2 million already have been spent by the Canadian government in searching for debris—some of it radioactive—from the fallen Soviet satellite.

In his address, much of which was devoted to a review of the over-all Soviet space program, Fedorov said it is unreasonable to restrict the orbit of satellites carrying nuclear energy sources.

Search Bill Tops $2M

OTTAWA (CP) — The search for pieces of a downed Soviet satellite in the Northwest Territories now has cost more than $2 million and the defence department is considering reducing search operations, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Tuesday.

Danson said in the Commons that a defence department team now is studying the search operation in Edmonton. A decision on further efforts would not be reached until the team reported its findings.

"It isn't a question of whether we will continue but at what level we will continue," the minister said outside the House.

The minister said he is still not satisfied that the nuclear core of the Soviet cosmos satellite disintegrated in the plunge to earth Jan. 24.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said the government does not want to name a final figure yet on the satellite search cost in talks with the Soviet Union. The government did not want to cut itself off as long as the operations continued.

Ottawa is still awaiting a reply from the Soviet Union to the government demand that the Soviets pay for the search operations, Jamieson said.

Teng Finally Cleared Of Fomenting Riots

PEKING (Reuter) — Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping has been cleared publicly for the first time of responsibility for bloody riots that erupted in Peking's central Tien An Men square in April 1976. The riots led to his temporary political eclipse.

The February issue of Red Flag, ideological journal of the Communist Party central committee, exonerates Teng of blame in the riots and accuses the purged Gang of Four extremist leaders of having slandered him.

The campaign against remaining extremist influence in China is still in full swing.

The Tien An Men square riots broke out when wreaths were placed in memory of Premier Chou En-lai who had died the previous January.

Tens of thousands of people had gathered in the huge square on the traditional Festival of the Dead. A number were injured and cars and a building set ablaze in the disturbances.

The People's Daily, the Communist party newspaper, said last December the Gang of Four went mad after the riot, using it to further their own ends.

The Red Flag article marks the first time that Teng has been cleared of responsibility in the incident by name.

Red Flag also says that the Gang of Four headed by Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching, switched their attacks to the current party chairman, Hua Kuo-feng, after bringing down Teng. Hua became premier after Chou's death and later succeeded Mao as Communist party chairman.

Kidnappers Free Huber

MUNICH (AP) — Political leader Franz Josef Strauss's foreign-policy adviser was found early today some 24 hours after he apparently was kidnapped.

A police spokesman said Dieter Huber, 30, was pushed out of a van on a highway near the Munich airport about 2 a.m. He walked to a nearby highway emergency phone and called police.

A patrol car took Huber to a hospital. He appeared to be suffering from shock, the police spokesman said.

Strauss is chairman of the conservative Christian Social Union, the Bavarian affiliate of the Christian Democratic party, and has been defence and finance minister in the federal West German government.

Huber's wife reported him missing early Monday, and his car was found near its garage with the keys and his dog inside. DPA, the West German news agency, received a letter Tuesday signed KGS that said Huber had been kidnapped so that "Strauss can show how much freedom and human life are worth to him."

Life is Interstellar?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A Rice University researcher suggested today that all of the ingredients for life are contained in the gases and dusts that swirl throughout the universe.

Dr. Raymond Talbot told the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science that astronomers have used new techniques for radio astronomy to identify many molecules necessary for life in the interstellar medium.

While scientists have no techniques at present to detect some molecules, "there is every suggestion that they are there anyway," he said in a paper delivered at the meeting.

Dr. Talbot said many of the molecules already discovered are those contained in the "primordial soup" which has been produced in laboratory experiments.

"This fact raises the possibility that the phenomenon we know as 'life' many be a natural, common, universal advanced stage of interstellar organic chemistry," he said.

He said the complex organic molecules found in space, once thought to be a lifeless void between the stars, now are believed to be atoms moving about on the surfaces of small silicate grains which astronomers refer to as dust.

Except for the size and degree of complexity, Dr. Talbot asked rhetorically, is there any difference between these complex interstellar particles and the large silicate grain we know as earth?

Typhoid Outbreak In U.S.

BOSTON (AP) — At least 17 cases of typhoid fever have been diagnosed in Massachusetts and New Hampshire residents who visited Mexico last month with a tour group, state health officials said Tuesday.

Almost all of the 306 tourists in the group which visited Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, between Jan. 22 and Jan. 29 have been found and urged to have medical checks.

Officials took those steps after 11 Massachusetts residents who went on the week-long trip were found to have the disease.

The state public health department said one of the Massachusetts residents was seriously ill. But Dr. Nicholas Fiumara, director of the division of communicable diseases, said there is no chance of an outbreak because drugs are effective against the disease.

Typhoid is spread through food or liquids contaminated by urine or feces of a carrier of the disease, Whalen said, but he also said it is unlikely the disease would spread.

No Jets for Arabs, Begin Begs U.S.

Times News Services

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin called on President Carter today to reconsider his proposal to sell U.S. military aircraft to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, saying they would be used against Israel in any future war.

"Israel has knowledge that Saudi Arabia has already promised a certain state that those planes will be at its disposal in the event of a new war against Israel," Begin told the Knesset (parliament).

The Carter administration announced in Washington Tuesday that it proposes to sell Egypt 50 F-5E planes and Saudi Arabia 60 of the more-advanced F-15s. The sales are subject to the approval of the U.S. Congress

At the same time the U.S. administration said it proposes to supply Israel with 90 sophisticated F-15 and F-16 aircraft and insisted the basic military balance in the Middle East would not be altered.

However, Begin said the proposed sales to the two Arab countries would endanger Israel's security and the Middle East peacemaking process.

The Israeli leader said that he has received an invitation from President Carter to visit Washington next month for three days of talks.

But Begin did not give any precise dates for a Washington visit.

Begin thanked Carter for his proposal to supply Israel with 90 planes and said he hopes Washington will increase this number.

"But in the name of the majority in this house, I appeal to President Carter to reconsider his decision to supply offensive weapons to Egypt and the most-sophisticated planes to Saudi Arabia."

Other Israeli officials also attacked Carter's proposal to sell jet fighters to Egypt and Saudi Arabia. The Saudis were silent, and an Egyptian military spokesman was pleased but not overjoyed.

Israel's friends in the U.S. Congress were more concerned over Carter's proposal to sell Saudi Arabia the F-15 fighters than they were over the F-5Es promised to Egypt.

JET AIRLINER CATCHES FIRE

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE (AFP) — A Sabena Airlines jet caught fire on landing at this Canary Islands community today but the blaze was quickly controlled and no passengers were believed to be seriously injured.

The accident involving a Boeing-707 on a charter flight from Brussels was caused by failure of the plane's landing gear, sources here said.

The aircraft was left blocking the main runway, causing suspension of all flights in and out of Los Rodeos airport.

Real Long Distance Telephone Calls

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of Irish businessmen flew from Dublin to London and the Continent just to make telephone calls.

One Dublin executive chartered a plane for •125 ($268) to fly him to Belfast, in Northern Ireland, so he could make a 40-pence (about 80-cent) call to London and clinch a •-million ($10.75-million) deal.

Scores of other executives drove 100 kilometres through snow and ice to Newry, just across the border with Northern Ireland, to use telephones and Telexes to keep their businesses going.

Hotels in Newry and Belfast were filled with Dublin businessmen.

Business in the Irish republic was hit hard by a strike by post office technicians after a long slowdown. All telephone, Telex and telegraph circuits in and out of the country were shut down when the strike began five days ago.

Communication lines inside Ireland also were affected. Dublin was nearly cut off from Cork, Limerick and Galway, the country's other main cities.

"It took up to eight days to make a phone call last week from Dublin to Cork (250 kilometres away)," one businessman said. "Now it's impossible."

The exporters' association said the blackout was costing at least •1 million ($2.15 million) a day in lost orders. Domestic business and industry also are "suffering badly," the Financial Times says.

The post office technicians went on strike after a slowdown and nine months of an increasingly bitter dispute over new work practices the post and telegraphs department ordered to improve the service. The post office engineering union said it was not consulted about the changes and demanded more money for its members.

The Irish Times said the dispute has reached "crisis proportions threatening the industrial and commercial life of the country." It said newspaper coverage, especially of foreign and financial reports, also was "gravely disrupted"

Prime Minister Jack Lynch called an emergency cabinet meeting today to discuss the crisis but rejected calls from political leaders, businessmen and labor unions to intervene in the dispute.

EDINBURGH (Reuter) — A Scottish university that stages an annual international music festival announced Tuesday that it will not hold the event this year if a group from South Africa is to take part.

Four South African groups have appeared in previous seasons of the International Festival of Youth Orchestras at the University of Aberdeen in northeastern Scotland.

'Angels' Rescue Skier, 76

BEAR VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A 76-year-old ski patrolman who had nearly given up hope of rescue told of two harrowing days wandering lost and hungry in a freezing, snow-choked mountain wilderness.

Albert Eggen, a volunteer patrolman at Mount Reba ski area 320 kilometres east of San Francisco, was rescued Tuesday by a search team a mile from where he lost his way in a blizzard last Sunday afternoon.

"I tell you I was never so happy to see anybody; I'd just about given up," said Eggen, after a California Highway Patrol helicopter spotted him sitting on more than three metres of snow.

"As soon as they saw me," said Eggen, "they circled over me and came back low enough until they could tell me with a bullhorn that they were going to send help."

"They were like angels."

Only minutes later, he said, "three top skiers came down the mountain from nowhere to where I was."

"Oh, man! I tell you, I can't describe the feeling. Just joy. I can't describe it!"

Eggen, who carried only a first-aid pack and a few mint candies, said he was blinded by heavy, blowing snow. He overshot the top of the run and landed on the other side of the mountain. The farther he went, the more disoriented he became. Finally he realized he was lost.

He said he stopped Sunday night on the edge of a forest and was forced to stamp up and down the entire night to keep from freezing. He estimates it was 12 degrees below zero Celsius. All day Monday he waited fruitlessly for rescue, occasionally eating snow.

By Monday night he managed to hack off some tree branches which he used as a bed, getting short catnaps through the dark hours. He had matches but nothing to burn except his skis, and that he would not do.

Eggen, who has no plans to quit skiing, said he plans to go back to work today at the San Jose glass company he operates. He expects a stern lecture from his wife, Hazel, upon the hazards of skiing in blizzards.

Mrs. Eggen is 62. She skis, too.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old driver who led two police forces on a three-mile, high-speed car chase earlier Tuesday was jailed 10 days by Judge Fred Giles in provincial court.

Maurice Ivor Deblois, CFB Work Point Barracks, pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and driving while under suspension and was given 10-day, concurrent sentences. Deblois had also pleaded guilty to impaired driving but Crown counsel Nicholas Lang withdrew the charge after informing the court previous rulings did not allow convictions on both dangerous and impaired driving. A charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 was also withdrawn.

Court was told the chase started at 2:41 a.m. when Saanich police tried to stop Deblois by using emergency equipment. The chase went over a three-mile route and included Victoria city police. It ended at Government and Fisgard when Deblois' vehicle collided with Victoria and Saanich police cars.

Lang said Deblois also ran two police roadblocks and two red lights during the chase, which reached speeds of 130 km/h. He said that "only through good luck and the grace of God was no one killed during the pursuit."

Deblois was suspended indefinitely Oct. 13, 1977, by the motor-vehicles branch and Lang read a driving record which included 17 violations for either speeding or careless driving since 1974.

Legal-aid lawyer Loretta Chaperone said Deblois had a "considerable problem with alcohol" and had been drinking with a friend prior to the incident.

Giles described Deblois' driving record as "almost a complete disregard for the law," and handed out the jail terms as well as placing Deblois on one year's probation. In addition, Giles prohibited Deblois from driving during his probation period and ordered him to take both the military and civilian impaired drivers courses.

Giles sentenced a 21-year-old man to six months in jail and said he will recommend the time be served at the Alouette River unit for alcoholic rehabilitation.

Kenneth Brian McKee, 477 Lampson, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and court was informed McKee was stopped at about 10:45 p.m. Monday by Sgt. Bryan Bailey of the Victoria city police at Douglas and Johnson.

McKee was asked about a typewriter and fur piece he was carrying. When asked to describe the typewriter, which was in a case, McKee told the officer it was blue with black keys. When the case was opened, the typewriter turned out to be green with white keys. McKee then said the fur coat belonged to his wife but had no answer when asked why there was a price tag of $175 still on the article.

Shortly after, a break-in was reported at Elley's Leather Fashions Ltd., 738 Johnson.

Lang read a criminal record for McKee which included three convictions for impaired driving, two for theft and one each for mischief and carrying a concealed weapon. The last conviction was for impaired driving in June when he was sentenced to three months in jail.

Chaperone said McKee also had a serious drinking problem and was discharged from the armed forces because of it.

Edward Eric Fedorchuk, 26, of 1345 Pandora; was given a suspended sentence and placed on two years probation ater he pleaded guilty to being unlawfully in a dwelling house.

Lang said the incident occurred last Tuesday when Fedorchuk went to the Montreal Street home of his estranged wife.

Court was told that on Feb. 2 in Supreme Court here, Judge Montague Drake, sitting as a local judge in Supreme Court, issued a restraining order against such visits.

Lang said when Fedorchuk appeared at the front door, his wife started to phone police. Fedorchuk then kicked in the front door and ripped out the phone. Police arrived later and arrested Fedorchuk.

Court was also informed that police overheard Fedorchuk say to his wife, "It doesn't matter if I'm in jail six months. I'll get out and I'll kill you."

Defence lawyer Jasper Bomhof told Giles it was a domestic dispute and suggested the case should be treated as a breach of a court order. He said alcohol was involved in this incident and was a problem but that Fedorchuk was willing to seek counselling.

Giles also ordered Fedorchuk to seek any counselling directed by his probation officer, and also prohibited Fedorchuk from possession of any weapon during the probation period.

Defence lawyer Richard Stewart elected trial by judge without jury on behalf of his client, 24-year-old Rick Darrell Gouge, 156 View Royal. Gouge is charged with indecent assault following a Jan. 28 incident.

Stewart also waived his client's right to a preliminary hearing and said Gouge consented to staying in custody for the time being.

Fined for drinking driving were: Earl Richard Barr, 19, of CFB Work Point Barracks, $250; and Carl Arthur Irvin, 51, of 3610 Park Drive, $200. In addition, Irvin was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand made by Colwood RCMP.

Crown Fails to Raise Fish Fine

A Victoria county court judge, hearing an appeal from provincial court, said Tuesday the particular circumstances of each case must be considered — and he rejected a Crown suggestion that fines should be uniform in fisheries offences.

The Crown was appealing a sentence by Judge William Ostler last summer in which Francisco Fantillo and Vincenzo Fantillo, Esquimalt fishermen, were fined $150 each for catching 502 pounds of under-sized spring salmon and had the under-size fish (but not the rest of the total catch of 2,880 pounds) confiscated.

Judge Leslie Cashman said it "is not, in my view, a proper view" of the law that fines should be uniform.

"Every case must be judged according to the particular circumstances," he said.

He said it was clear that Ostler did consider the particular circumstances of the offence and the Fantillo brothers themselves and a fine of $150 each was appropriate.

He doubted that another judge would have levied a much higher sentence.

Crown counsel R.B. Hutchison said after that appeal was dismissed he was not pursuing another appeal in which John Jenkins, 27, of Metchosin, was fined $100 and had 130 pounds of undersized spring salmon confiscated in similar circumstances, and Cashman dismissed that appeal as well.

Hutchison, in his submission, said commercial salmon fishermen at the head of Juan de Fuca Strait must not, under a Fisheries Act regulation then in existence, catch springs less than 26 inches, or less than 18½ inches with the head removed.

He said it's not an uncommon offence, and fines should be uniform. He said Cashman should give guidance to provincial courts.

He also said that for conservation and deterrence, the penalties in the cases under appeal were insufficient.

"The fishing fleets must know that the courts are treating with considerable concern this sort of offence," he said.

The Fantillos' lawyer, Derek Brindle, referred to a "type of inadvertence" which had led them to court for the first time and argued that Ostler did consider deterrence to the general fishing fleet in his judgment.

He also said a fish can be over 26 inches with the head on when hauled in but be under 18½ inches when the head is removed. In the Fantillos case, he said, it was after the head was removed that they were found to be undersized but with the heads on they were legal-sized fish.

Cashman said "there is a certain difficulty, depending where the head is removed.

Hutchison said the headless length regulation had since been changed to 20 inches and the maximum fine for catching under-size fish had been increased to $5,000 from $1,000.

Accused 'Naive'

A 22-year-old man, described as foolish, naive and easily led, was given a conditional discharge and placed on probation for 18 months in county court Tuesday.

Stephen Barclay Wilcock, HMCS Provider, pleaded guilty to possession of a variety of stolen property worth more than $200.

Judge Leslie Cashman told Wilcock he was charged with a serious offence and liable to a jail sentence of up to 10 years. But the prosecution had not sought a jail sentence in this particular case and he wouldn't have given one if there was such a request.

He said a conditional discharge, which means Wilcock will not have a criminal record if he stays out of trouble through his probation, "is in the best interests of you and not contrary to the public interest."

He added: "I hope you have learned your lesson. It's up to you."

"MARGARET'S TELLIN' ME ALL ABOUT HER NEW HAIR-DO."

The Bridge Expert

In the post-mortem analysis of today's deal, it was revealed that the defenders could have defeated South's game contract. However, for them to have done so would have required clairvoyance on their part. The deal arose in a tournament.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

Upon winning the opening lead with the spade ace, East shifted to the queen of diamonds, dummy's ace taking the trick. The four adversely held trumps were picked up in two rounds, after which the king and queen of spades were cashed. On the queen of spades, dummy's three of diamonds was discarded.

Declarer now led his remaining diamond, thus eliminating diamonds from both the North and South hands. It mattered not which of the opponents elected to win this diamond trick, for it was impossible for them to cash two club tricks. Whichever defender won this trick would play a club, West's ace perforce taking the trick.

West would now have no choice but to lead either a spade or a diamond; and whichever he led would be ruffed with the board's last trump while, simultaneously, South would discard his remaining club on this trick.

Had declarer not discarded a diamond from dummy on the queen of spades, the four-spade contract would have been defeated. In this case West, upon winning his ace of clubs, would simply have led a diamond for declarer to ruff. Eventually East would have made his club king.

As was stated, the contract could have been defeated even after West had elected to lead a spade at trick one. If East, upon winning this trick, had shifted to a club at trick two, the defenders could not have been prevented from making two club tricks, a spade and a diamond. However, East certainly cannot be faulted for having led a diamond at trick two.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A H. HUNTER

It was night in the land of Kalota and Kerin the High Priest stood with his son Karl on the level paving outside the temple. Then spake Carl saying: Blessed be the keeper of the lamp set high in the wall that lights our way, but I know not how high it is.

And Kerin answered saying: the truth is in the shadows cast upon the paving. The length of this my staff is 4 kins, the half of my height. Standing nigh unto me it casts a shadow 11 kins long, and the measure of my shadow is 24 kins.

How high was the lamp?

Thanks for idea to P. C. Mehta, Toronto.

Steelworkers Sue in 'Vote Fraud'

By GARRY FAIRBAIRN

WASHINGTON (CP) — Alleging that massive vote fraud occurred in Canada and the United States last year during United Steelworkers of America elections, the losing candidates in that vote filed suit Tuesday to force the U.S. labor department to call a new election.

Edward Sadlowski of Chicago, defeated presidential candidate, and four other members of his slate named Labor Secretary Ray Marshall as defendant in the suit filed in U.S. district court.

The reported results of the union election, held Feb. 8, 1977, were 249,281 for Sadlowski and 328,861 for his opponent, Lloyd McBride, a candidate endorsed by previous union president I. W. Abel.

Of the 1.4 million union members, about 180,000 are in Canada.

The Sadlowski suit contends that widespread voting fraud occurred in Canada but was ignored by a Canadian labor department investigation headed by Roland Tremblay, a Quebec lawyer who has often been used by the department as a mediator.

The suit charges that the U.S. labor secretary was negligent in not considering Trembley unfit to head such an investigation since Sadlowski lawyers had informed the secretary last year that Tremblay was arbitrating cases involving the steelworkers, resulting in a situation where "you now have a Canadian investigator who is making no real investigation and cannot do so because he is in the pay of the people he is investigating."

Secretary Marshall, however, replied by letter that Tremblay's role as an arbitrator did not make him unfit to conduct an investigation of the union election.

And the McBride slate issued a news release last year denying that Tremblay had any reason to be biased in their favor.

The release said both Tremblay and Labor Minister John Munro, who appointed him, were "political conservatives" whom the union had opposed in past dealings.

Although Canadian members of the union are outnumbered by U.S. members, the Sadlowski suit contends that the role of the Canadian membership is significant.

The suit says that Canadian elections within the union have a long history of fraud and a past union president, David McDonald, has stated before the election "unless Sadlowski would have an overwhelming victory in the United States he will not win the presidency. The Canadian return sheets will carry enough votes in favor of Lloyd McBride that he will be declared elected."

The alleged instances of Canadian fraud listed in the suit included:

—"Local unions reported incredible results such as zero and near zero votes for the Sadlowski slate; local unions reported the same vote for all members of both slates."

—McBride supporters campaigned in union polling areas and on union time.

—"McBride supporters reported final results before the counting of ballots was completed."

—"Local unions reported more votes for McBride than there were union members."

—"The violations were so widespread and so flagrant that local union officials in more than one half of the locals contacted by Sadlowski investigators the week after the election and selected at random admitted serious illegalities in their locals on election day."

Inflation Warning From Opposition

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canadians were cautioned against thinking "inflation has been wrestled to the ground," again by Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party spokesmen Tuesday after Statistics Canada reported the rate of increase in prices was down from a month earlier.

Oil price increases already approved by Ottawa and set to take effect next month will cost the average Canadian family $50 in real purchasing power said NDP Leader Ed Broadbent. He said this price increase is not reflected in the latest consumer price index estimates.

Sinclair Stevens, the Progressive Conservative financial critic in the Commons, said he will attach greater significance to the cost of living index at the end of the first quarter of the year.

"If these figures show any continuing trend, that will be encouraging," he said.

"But I feel most economists who have predicted an inflation rate in the seven to eight per cent rante over the year will be borne out. If this is so it will be a very sad confirmation that the government's original target of only four per cent inflation by October has been missed badly," he said.

The Conservative spokesman said Canadians must be growing more cynical of the government following the official predictions made at the current first ministers' meeting of 3.5 per cent inflation three years from now.

The dangerous factor, in his view, that must be taken into consideration is that the government "is back to the printing press." It is increasing the money supply at an annual rate of 17 per cent.

This he noted was about 12 per cent more than the government's own anti-inflation guidelines for increasing the supply of money.

"With a real growth of three to only four per cent a monetary incraase of this magnitude means eight per cent inflation in the future," he predicted.

Broadbent said that the statistics issued Tuesday by the government "show that Canadian families continue to suffer from the failure of the federal government to control the cost of living." He said that the consumer price index performance will not improve measureably despite federal claims, until the government makes some serious policy shifts.

"Food and housing costs, in particular, continue to plague the efforts of Canadians to make ends meet," said Broadbent.

Refusal by Blais Draws Angry Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Keable angrily attacked Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais Tuesday for "opting deliberately for a strategy of open confrontation" with Keable's commission of inquiry into police wrongdoing in Quebec.

Keable was commenting on Blais' hard-line refusal to hand over certain RCMP files to the commission and to obey an order to appear in person to explain the reasons for his action.

The commissioner stopped short of citing Blais for contempt of court, saying he would consider the matter carefully "before taking a legal decision the consequences of which could be extremely serious."

"The commission cannot prevent itself from noting how surprised and disappointed it is by the attitude of the solicitor-general of Canada," Keable said, using language never employed during months of wrangling with Blais' predecessor, Francis Fox.

Blais has "deliberately opted for a strategy of confrontation with the commission . . . in an effort to deliberately block the commission's work and to prevent it from throwing light on some troubling incidents committed on Quebec territory," Keable added.

Using his power under the Quebec Inquiry Commissions Act, Keable could issue a bench warrant, ordering police to arrest Blais and force him to appear before the commission. The commissioner could then take steps to cite the minister for contempt of court.

Under Quebec law, a provincial commission of inquiry has the same power as a court of law to subpoena witnesses and to issue contempt citations if the subpoenas are not honored.

Lawyer Michel Robert, representing Blais, argued that his client could not be forced to appear because of his privileges as a member of the House of Commons and as a federal minister of the Crown.

If a commissioner or judge tries to force any MP to appear while Parliament is in session, "he is open to prosecution before the House," Robert said.

Keable replied that the question of Blais' privilege would be "the essential point which the commission will consider" before taking a decision.

FARMERS URGE DATA CHANGES

QUEBEC (CP)—Farmers think they are being painted as the villains responsible for rising food prices and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture (CFA) took steps Tuesday which it hopes will change that picture.

It voted to ask the federal government to alter the format of the monthly Consumer Price Index to make the effects of food handling and imports more evident.

Delegates to the CFA's annual meeting also endorsed a resolution asking Statistics Canada to include figures on increases in income when it releases the monthly inflation rate.

No Coffee Cuts

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian coffee industry official says no drop in price is expected in Canada similar to the recent wholesale price decrease in the eastern United States.

General Foods Corp. in the U.S. announced it is dropping the wholesale price three cents a pound to $3.18 in its markets east of the Mississippi River to bring the price in line with those west of the river. The decrease will be passed on to consumers, officials said.

Security Tightened On Income Tax Files

OTTAWA (CP) — Security measures to prevent access by unauthorized persons to confidential tax information have been tightened since slack security was revealed by Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell, senior revenue officials said Tuesday.

However, the officials told MPs in the Commons public accounts committee that RCMP are still investigating a controversial case in which Toronto broadcasters Charles Templeton and Pierre Berton received secret tax-return information from an individual police have not yet charged.

Deputy Revenue Minister B. A. MacDonald said the information obtained for the broadcasters came from manual paper files, not from computers. It was slack security around computer terminals and tapes that Macdonell reported to Parliament in December.

MacDonald said junior clerks in offices in Vancouver, Montreal and Ottawa revenue offices gave the confidential information over the telephone to a man posing as a tax officer and the three clerks came forward when RCMP began their investigation.

"They were duped," he said in an interview. The person who gave the caller secret information from Toronto files has not yet come forward, however. The clerks gave the information, including some from Conservative Leader Joe Ciark's file, after the individual cited a name, social insurance number or tax account number in each case.

MacDonald said clerks now have access to fewer files and seek more details from such callers, depending on the information sought. Recently when a man called he was asked how many children he had and he replied correctlu but when asked to name the children the man hung up.

"Until this incident we were satisfied as to the bona fides of a person calling if he had a social insurance number or a tax account number," MacDonald said.

As an extra measure, clerks now have access to only one section of files, there are two million files in Toronto alone, and department accountants are prohibited from entering the file section. They must fill out a request for each file they want to look at.

MacDonald said the department now keeps detailed records of which employees have access to what records "so there is an audit trail." But he could give no guarantee that some employee would not decide to leak secret information.

"It's essential human nature that we're dealing with," he said.

MacDonald was replying to wide-ranging questions from MPs including Thomas Lefebvre (L—Pontiac) who said people are concerned by the leaks. "Everyone was a little shocked by the revelation." The department handles about 12 million tax returns annually.

MacDonald said security procedures at the main computer tape library have been improved as Macdonell recommended. There are about 38,000 reels of magentic computer tape in the library here and procedures for releasing them have been fermally tightened up he said.

Macdonell had said there was a danger unauthorized persons could get information when the tapes are removed from the liberary for test runs on new computer programs and other non-routine work.

Assistant Deputy Minister D. S. Brooks told Yves Demers (L—Duvernay) that an individual would have to have access to the computer program—one of a kind—as well as a tape and a computer terminal to gain access to secret information from the machine.

"It is conceivable but extremely difficult to do," MacDonald said. Even computer operators are not fully aware of the complete computer program."

Commission Split Over Mail Opening

OTTAWA (CP) — Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, chairman of a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, and commissioner Guy Gilbert took sharply different positions Tuesday on the results of an investigation of illegal mail-opening carried out by Paul Boisvert, director of the post office security and investigation services branch.

The investigation was carried out at commission request after RCMP supplied the time and place of 79 incidents in which it had been involved in opening mail or had sought co-operation of postal employees to do so.

Forty-one of the 79 inspectors questioned by Boisvert replied that they hadn't been involved and eight refused to say anything. The others didn't reply in any detail for a variety of reasons, including sick leave.

Furthermore, Boisvert's letter specified only RCMP Security Service requests, omitting incidents involving the RCMP Criminal Investigation Branch, which has said it has opened mail in drug cases.

Opening first-class mail is against the law.

"I'm inclined to call your investigation a sketchy job," Gilbert, a Montreal lawyer, observed.

A few moments later, McDonald told Boisvert: "You have more than carried out what you were asked to do."

Gilbert, consistently the most aggressive of the three commissioners, asked whether Boisvert had taken any steps to ensure that illegal mail-openings aren't continuing. Boisvert said he hadn't.

McDonald took another tack, picking Boisvert's brains with suggestions of ways RCMP opening of mail may be made legal. Boisvert agreed with the judge's suggestions.

The government last month, with the royal commission still trying to determine the extent of illegal mail-opening, introduced a bill that would give police broad powers to open private mail.

The commission today will hear further witnesses on Ie mail-opening in the Toshio Omura case. Omura, a member of the terrorist Japanese Red Army, was deported from Canada late in 1976 as a result of information from informants and finger prints on a coffee cup.

Prime Minister Trudeau and former solicitor-general Francis Fox have indicated that mail-opening played a major part in his arrest. But testimony earlier this month from an RCMP witness did not bear this out.

Magazine Firms Blasted by MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of Canada's largest association of magazine distributors were accused of "intellectual pimpery" Tuesday as they were grilled by a Commons committee on anti-pornography law.

Simma Holt (L—Vancouver-Kingsway) noted that some representatives of the Periodical Distributors of Canada conceded before the committee they would not take home to their families magazines they sell to the public.

"It is intellectual pimpery and I find it offensive to walk past newsstands and see a picture of a naked woman playing with herself," Mrs. Holt said.

Angrily waving a bundle of letters and girlie magazines, she said she personally could refute, on the evidence of letters, material and petitions sent to her, the contention of one poll that indicated 75 per cent of Canadians favor distribution of such material.

The PDC, in a statement to the justice committee hearings on 10 anti-pornography bills put forward by individual MPs, said that to make obscenity laws more strict would risk a "repressive and suffocating atmosphere."

"If we are going to use police methods to control what people read we are moving toward a police state," said Charles Marshall, a grandfatherly figure whose Halifax firm is the main magazine distributor for Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

"I have agonized over this problem for years," he said when questioned on where the line should be drawn between freedom and acceptable standards.

PDC representatives before the committee used "poetic language" in describing their college educations and family life, stormed Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), but they were engaged in big business and exploiting people.

They dealt in such things as "a naked female having sexual intercourse with a lizard" and "public opinion is pretty aroused."

In response to Woolliams, Marshall said his firm does an annual gross business of about $10 million, of which about 15 per cent involved "adult" magazines. He said net profit after taxes and providing for growth is about two per cent.

Marshall said it "is not our role to decide" what should be sold. Penthouse magazine was a best-seller and there was an established demand for material of this nature.

"There is an established demand for prostitution," snapped Mrs. Holt, but that didn't make it proper.

Toby Levinson, a Toronto psychologist and member of the PDC advisory committee on contemporary literature, said there is evidence sexually-explicit material is beneficial and that there is no established link between pornography and crime.

In Denmark, where all controls are removed, the Danish people lost interest in pornography and the incident of sexual crime went down, Ms. Levinson said.

China was not a religious country, said Mrs. Holt, but pornography was banned because it destroys "the fabric of a country and they are trying to build a country.

"We are destroying a country."

The problem, said Dean Whiteway (PC—Selkirk), is the balance between individual freedomand absolute licence. Marshall said many learned people have tried to write such laws and he wished the committee luck but, meanwhile, "we are caught between."

Marshall said members of PDC, 39 companies distributing the bulk of magazines and paperback books in Canada, do not knowingly distribute hard-core pornography, child pornography or sex with animals.

Ms. Levinson said her advisory committee in making recommendations to distributors urged that material depicted must be "adult, human and non-violent" in nature.

Five-Year TV Plan For North

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — The council of the Northwest Territories has announced a $2.1 million, five-year plan to bring national television service to 18 small northern communities.

The program will provide facilities to communities with populations between 250 and 500 people — if the majority of adults are in favor.

The plan was announced as territorial council studied details of 1978-79 spending estimates for the department of information. These included $86,000 in grants to community broadcasting societies for extension of national radio and television signals and $70,000 in grants to licensed community radio stations.

Art Sorenson, director of the territorial department of information, said outside the assembly that the plan also provides $140,000 in grants over a two-year period to existing community-owned radio broadcasting stations.

Good Markets But. . .

TORONTO (CP) — John Nelson, head of a federal study group on industry, trade and commerce, said Tuesday that Iran, Iraq and Saudi Arabia are potentially good export markets for Canada.

Nelson told an export workshop, sponsored by the Canadian Manufacturers Association, that care must be taken when negotiating a contract in these countries.

He said business should be done in person despite the expense.

Businessmen travelling in the region should have the authority to make decisions because they will lose the trust of the people they are negotiating with if they refer matters back to head office.

He also said a Canadian businessman should have a local agent who is familiar with the customs, laws and language of the country.

J. S. Kyles, president of Bell Canada International, a subsidiary of Bell Canada of Montreal, told the workshop that Canada has several advantages when doing business in this region.

He said Canada has no political aspirations and is a well regarded trading nation. Kyles also said Canadian technology is respected and the people of Saudi Arabia prefer English to other foreign languages.

Fishing Aid

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Canada will provide technical assistance and financial aid to El Salvador's fishing industry under an agreement signed earlier this week.

The agreement, signed by Canadian Ambassador Ralph Reynolds, will continue aid to El Salvador's national navigation and fishing institute, which already runs a vessel donated by Canada.

OTTAWA-IMPOSED PACTS URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Tuesday "it is absolutely necessary" for the Canada Labor Relations Board to have authority to impose a first contract agreement when the parties can't settle their own disputes.

Munro said too frequently employees are certified as a bargaining unit by the CLRB and when they go to negotiate with the employer "it spins out and spins out and no collective agreement is ever signed."

Delays weaken the bargaining units "and before you know it the whole thing dies and the employees lose the right to bargain collectively," Munro told the Commons labor committee.

"This is a situation we run into frequently in the federal jurisdiction, particularly in the broadcasting industry."

Quebec's Policy Hurts: Sun Life

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government's commitment to independence has led some prospective policyholders to refuse to buy insurance from any company with its head office in Quebec, Sun Life Co. of Canada policyholders were told Tuesday.

Company president Thomas Galt also told reporters that competing insurance companies outside Quebec were using the fact that Sun Life is Quebec-based to sell against it.

He said the company has recorded a 10-per-cent loss in individual policy business in Canada for the period ended Dec. 31, 1977, because potential customers refused to buy insurance from a company whose head office was in Quebec.

The company had also "a small decline in new business in Quebec" since it announced last month it wanted to move its head office to Toronto.

Galt earlier told about 400 people at the annual policyholders' meeting the company "had received a great many letters, telegrams and telephone calls both for and against, but substantially in favor" of the proposed move.

"I am very grateful to those many people who have taken the trouble to write in support of our actions."

Asked whether directors who voted to propose the move to policyholders were thinking of doing the same with their own companies, Sun Life chairman Alistair Campbell said directors "reacted purely on the grounds of the special circumstances of Sun Life."

While management got more support from the policyholders, a sizeable group applauded Montreal lawyer Richard Holden when he argued against the move.

Holden, who has threatened to take the company to court because it has refused him access to computers and mailing lists of policy-holders, accused the board of directors of "being overwhelmed" by recent events in Quebec and described them as "fleeing to Toronto."

As a fourth-generation Montrealer, he said, he was insulted that the company would hold the special policyholders' meeting on the proposed move in Toronto.

Galt replied Toronto was chosen because it was more central for North American policyholders wishing to attend the meeting.

Jacques Thivierge, 62, a Sun Life agent in Quebec City for more than 20 years, advised the directors to stay and fight in Quebec "like good warriors."

"We can stand it, I hope you can," he said. "Dozens of agents and hundreds of policy-holders have expressed regrets about the plan to move our head office from the homeland."

He said he had always been "a proud standard-bearer" of the Sun Life banner in Quebec and advised the directors to do battle on the homeland "rather than running away from it."

Thivierge prefaced his remarks by a short anecdote in French, the only French spoken at the company's 107th annual general meeting.

SEPARATE TRIALS REFUSED PAIR

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice William Parker of the Ontario Supreme Court refused Tuesday to grant separate trials or to separate the counts against two men and one company accused of conspiracy to commit fraud in harbor-dredging contracts.

John Bahen and Hugh Martin are each charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud the federal government and the Toronto board of harbor commissioners of more than $1 million. Bahen is secretary-treasurer of Peter Kiewit Co. Ltd. which is charged with the same count, and Martin is chairman of Canadian Dredge and Dock Co. Ltd., which is named in the same charge and in four others.

George Finlayson, lawyer for Bahen and Kiewit, and Douglas Laidlaw, lawyer for Martin, argued for a separation, saying that a jury would not be able to differentiate between evidence relating to their clients and evidence relating to the other defendants.

The motion was one of several pre-trial motions in the fraud trial in which 11 Canadian businessmen and eight companies are charged with seven counts of conspiring to defraud the federal government, the Ontario government, the Toronto harbor commission and the Hamilton harbor commission of more than $4.2 million between 1969 and 1975.

Mr. Justice Parker said he was not satisfied that justice would be served by separate trials, adding that the Crown had made arrangements so the defendants and their lawyers could be absent from court when their charges were not being discussed.

Apology Demanded For Houswife Slur

OTTAWA (CP) — An MP demanded Tuesday that Science Minister Judd Buchanan apologize to millions of housewives for a gratuitous insult contained in a departmental report.

Robert Howie (PC—York Sunbury) said the report says that "because the household labor force is technologically unsophisticated it cannot make the right decisions when it purchases."

Howie said the report insults all housewives. He unsuccessfully attempted to move a motion in the Commons that said:

"That this unsophisticated minister apologize to the millions of Canadian housewives for his arrogance and slurs on their intelligence."

Opposition Hits Grits

Ray Hnatyshyn (PC—Saskatoon—Biggar) proposed a motion demanding Prime Minister Trudeau explain to provincial premiers the "inner workings of the casino economy which his government has created."

He said the Just Society Trudeau promised in his 1974 election campaign slogan has become a society "where it is three times as easy to win a prize in the government's lottery as it is to get a job out of the government's economic policies."

"The chances of winning a prize in the state lottery are one in nine, while the chances of getting a job are one in 26," Hnatyshyn said, apparently in reference to Loto Canada.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party Leader, said the government has yet to keep 1974 election promises to spend $290 million on urban transit in at least four cities and to build a new aircraft maintenance project in Winnipeg.

"The government usually lives up to its promises," Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen replied.

FOOD & nutrition

A Handy Prune's Dandy

hilda beastall

Making and cooking all meals at home demands the ability to substitute and ingredient for one normally used in a recipe. And knowing what will serve approximately the same purpose yet provide more nutrition is worth an additional merit mark for the homemaker.

Take an everyday ingredient such as prunes; you need a batch of raisin cookies for lunch boxes and a raisin pie for supper. With everything else ready to go — no raisins. Look for a substitute in dried prunes, an excellent standby food to have always in stock.

Dried prunes cut into small pieces with kitchen shears are near in texture to seedless raisins, which are also a dried fruit, processed by drying grapes. Prunes are dried plums.

In the Nutrient Value Chart of Canada Health Service we discover that in bulk we shall get more nutrition in a variety of minerals and vitamins from six prunes pitted and cut into pieces to fill a quarter cup measure than we shall from a quarter cup of raisins.

Note the raisins will weigh one ounce (28.35 gms), the prunes two ounces (56.7 gms), but the bulk measure going into the cookies or pie will be equal.

Suppose there is only a bowlful of cooked prunes when raisins are wanted. All is not lost. Take some from the juice and let them drain in a sieve over a basin while you begin taking them one at a time to remove the pits and cut into pieces. Use a knife and fork for the job. I find this keeps hands reasonably at the ready to answer the phone or cope with other events.

Although moist, the cut up prunes will have little excess juice. Drop them into the measure as you work. Put back the juice with those remaining.

Since the fruit will indeed be moister than dried raisins allow for this in the recipe. With cookies that list no liquid (water or milk) it would be necessary to leave out one egg to get a stiff cookie dough. For a pie filling, add an extra teaspoon of thickener, or leave out some of the water when substituting cooked prunes for the raisin filling. With dried prunes treat them as raisins, after they have been pitted and cut into pieces.

As a dessert fruit to have ready for any meal of the day, cook the dried prunes for about 25 minutes in enough water to cover. No need to soak overnight. Start with cold water and bring slowly to boiling. Prick two or three fruits to test for doneness.

High Class Dish for Snobs

Mary Moore

After discovering I was not the only one in our family connection with frozen leftover turkey and that the number of so-called pancake restaurants is increasing all over the continent I made some turkey crepes. This is a high class dish you can serve to your snobbish guests at minimum cost. During the test we had a ball because I had that Texas flu — horns and all included — and 15-year-old Jennifer was my nurse-companion. Every step she took she would carry bowl or pan for my bedside inspection and approval. I think I recovered quickly because of the laughs we had.

TURKEY CREPES

Filling:
- 2 Tbsp. butter
- 1 c. finely chopped inner celery
- 1 chicken oxo cube
- ¼ tsp. onion salt
- ¼ c. flour
- 1½ c. cut up cooked turkey meat (packed)
- ¾ c. milk
- ¾ c. sour cream (divided — see below)

Crepes:
- 2 eggs
- 6 Tbsp. all-purpose flour
- ⅛ tsp. salt
- butter for crepe pan (see below)

Make the filling first: Melt butter in frying pan and add the celery and saute until it is soaked with butter but still crispy but not brown at all. Add the chicken cube, onion salt and flour and mix. Add the turkey, milk and HALF CUP of the sour cream and cook, stirring until thick. Set aside but keep warm.

To make the crepes beat together until smooth all crepe ingredients and using your 5" crepe pan melt about 1 teaspoon butter in it to coat sides and bottom and when bubbling hot add a scant ¼-cup batter to pan and tip pan to make batter coat bottom. Cook until bottom is tinged with gold, flip over and cook other side about 30 seconds. Transfer to holding plate in warm place. Continue until all batter is cooked. You should have eight crepes for four people. Now these crepes are baked and I'll tell you how. BUT you can serve them on preheated dinner plates without baking at once IF filling and crepes are kept hot enough. Spoon about ½-cup filling on each crepe in a broad strip along centre. Fold over side flaps and place, open side down, in a buttered oblong baking dish about 6" wide. Continue filling crepes and place closely together in baking dish. Spread remaining ¼-cup sour cream thinly over all and bake covered loosely with foil at 400 deg. Fahr. until heated through. Remove foil during last 5 minutes to fleck tops with gold. Serve at once with a spinach and lettuce and cucumber salad.

The success of this dish depends on your determination to serve high class, low cost dinners with no alibis.

Ring Discovered

DONCASTER, England (CP) — Widow Ivy Hawley, 71, was shocked when her son found her engagement ring buried in the vegetable patch. She lost it 23 years ago while gardening but never told her husband, who died three years later believing she had stopped wearing it for fear it might slip off her finger.

A Handy Prune's Just Dandy

For breakfast or other meal, there is nothing more delicious than heaping cooked prunes with home-made plain yogurt. For small youngsters, take out the pits. Prune Whip and Prune Snow are simply elaborate variations of this simple dish, but with so much additional sugar and fat that its nutritional value is questionable.

Prune Nut Bread is a most desirale bread for packed lunches. It is not sweet, so it goes well with squares of Cheddar cheese, celery sticks and other fruits like banana. Just spread with a good vegetable soft margarine or peanut butter.

Prune Nut Bread

1 Tbsp granular yeast (or 1 pkt)
1¼ cups warmed cut prunes with some juice
3 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp dark molasses
1 tsp salt
1¼ cups wholewheat flour
½ cup soy flour
¼ cup wheat germ
¼ cup wheat bran (bulk)
⅓ cup skim milk powder
½ cup ground hazel or peanuts

In a small basin, sprinkle yeast on warmed prunes with juice. Stir and leave to work until frothy; about 10 minutes in warm place.

Meanwhile, measure all following dry ingredients into a sifter and stir a little to mix but do not sieve.

Now stir yeast and prunes into margarine mixture. Begin adding flour mixture, beating thoroughly with large wooden spoon. Halfway through beat with 40 strokes. Then continue adding flour mixture, beating as much as possible. This makes the dough light because it mixes in a quantity of air which expands with oven heat.

Grease and dust with flour a 9x5x3-inch pan. Spoon mixture into pan — it comes about half way full. Level top with spoon.

Put pan into cold oven. At once turn dial to 35 deg. C. (95 deg. F.) for dough to begin rising (about 20 minutes). Then turn dial to off, leave pan in oven until dough is about double in bulk.

Turn dial to hot 219 deg. C. (425 deg. F.) to stop rising and begin baking. After 20 minutes turn dial to warm 163 deg. C. (325 deg. F.) to continue baking. At same time cover loosely with foil to prevent scorching, as soy flour browns quickly.

This bread needs about another 30 minutes at the warm setting, a total of around 40 minutes after the rising period.

Remove from oven; turn out on wire rack to cool. A tender texture and most palatable flavor are the highlights of this easily made Prune Bread.

Pitted Prunes are also easily added to an attractive and nutritious salad either as a lunch dish or for supper.

To a green salad of shredded cabbage, or of green lettuce, with celery sticks, plentiful grated Cheddar cheese and grated nuts, add whole pitted prunes, topped with plain homemade yogurt.

And something a little different is a Norwegian Fruit Soup. Northern European countries traditionally relied heavily on dried fruits in winter for vitamins, adding them to soups or hot cereals.

Norwegian Fruit Soup

4 cups water
10 dried prunes, pitted
¾ cup oat flakes
2 Tbsp dark molasses
Juice of 1 lemon and 1 orange

Boil oats and prunes in water until prunes are tender. Add fruit juices and molasses. Heat to below boiling and serve for breakfast or lunch.

Dried prunes are less costly than canned fruits, yet take only minutes to cook. Adding sugar is entirely optional for the natural fruit sugar has been dried into the fruit.

The molasses can be left out, but it does add a richer, deeper flavor to the prunes.

Use prunes often, at any meal. Their good taste and their high food value makes them an economical daily food.

It's a Matter of Degrees When Oven Is Opened

With all the concern over decreasing energy resources and rising fuel costs, most people are becoming a little more energy conscious, especially in their homes. The kitchen is one place to watch. One of the greatest energy consumers is the oven and so use it wisely not wastefully. Avoid opening the oven door during baking. The average "peek" causes the oven temperature to drop 25 to 75 degrees.

Plan to cook all foods for a meal in one area of the range — either on top, in the oven or under the broiler. For example, enjoy a delicious oven cooked meal of baked pork chops, scalloped vegetables and a dessert-like apple crisp. Introduce the foods at the appropriate time and position them properly.

Another idea is to double or triple your recipes and freeze the rest for another meal.

What about range top cooking? Whenever cooking food in water, adjust the heat when the boiling point is reached. Once boiling, the food won't cook any faster on "high" than it does on "low" or "simmer." And when cooking fruits and vegetables, use very little water and don't overcook them. The more water used, the more energy is needed to bring it to a boil. Also less water conserves nutrients as well as energy.

Make the most use of counter top appliances. Portable electrical appliances, such as a toaster and electric skillet or griddle generally use less energy than a range for the same cooking jobs. For example, by preparing a complete meal such as breakfast, of pancakes and sausages on an electric griddle, energy can be saved as compared to heating several range top units to prepare the meal.

A final tip — by turning the heat off a few minutes before the food is cooked, the residual heat in an oven or electric element will complete the cooking. And so food consultants at Agriculture Canada encourage you to "kick the habit" of wasting energy, and make efficient, not extravagant, use of your kitchen power.

MARMALADE CAKE

⅓ cup chopped nuts
2 eggs
¾ cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¾ cup milk
1¾ cup buttermilk pancake mix
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
¼ cup orange marmalade

Generously grease 6-cup ring mold with vegetable shortening; sprinkle with nuts, coating surface evenly. Combine eggs, brown sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg; beat well. Gradually blend in milk. Stir in mix and butter. Pour into prepared ring mold. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 to 35 minutes. Cool 2 to 3 minutes. Loosen cake from edge of mold; invert onto serving plate. Spoon marmalade over top of warm cake; serve warm or cold. Makes 1 ring mold cake.

GOLDEN CORN FRITTERS

1 cup pancake mix
1 egg, beaten
½ cup milk
2 cups canned whole kernel corn, drained.

Place pancake mix in bowl. Add egg and milk, mixing until batter is fairly smooth. Lightly stir in corn, then let stand for 5 minutes. Drop batter by teaspoonfuls into hot deep fat (375° F.), turnin when brown on underside. (Total cooking time about 3 minutes). Drain on absorbent paper. Serve hot with maple-blended syrup. Makes 36 fritters.

Properly Made Cornish Pasty Culinary Delight

tiny bennett

By TINY BENNETT

One of the great treasures of English regional cooking is the pasty, a mixture of beef, onion, potato and turnip baked in a tightly-sealed pastry shell.

Now a specialty of Cornwall, and to a lesser degree the county of Devon, the pasty (pronounced parr-sty, rather than paysty) was known all over England as far back as the Middle Ages when such delights, stuffed with venison, were the highlights at feasts.

That it survived among the Cornish owes no little credit to the fact that the famed miners of that area would take one wrapped in a cloth for the noon meal, in the knowledge it would stay warm or could be reheated on a scoured shovel over the hardrock miner's candle.

The Cornish, who live in England's most beautiful county, have migrated to anywhere in the world where miners were needed, with the result that one can today meet with pasties in places far removed from the green fields and steep cliffs and narrow streets of Cornwall.

The secret of making a good pasty lies in using the best of raw ingredients, very carefully sealed in the pastry case, so that as the pastry bakes to a rich, crisp brown, all the filling cooks and blends flavors. And this is why it is so important to use good beef, onions, potatoes and turnips.

That slightly bitter flavor of the turnip becomes ambrosia in a well-built Cornish pasty. And yet the whole affair lives or dies on the meat that is used.

In Cornwall some years ago, I'd driven all night to arrive at Looe Harbour at 6 a.m. to go out near the Eddystone Lighthouse to fish for sharks. I brought a couple of pasties to make my lunch. They were mostly potato and turnip, and after one bite I threw them over the side, and gratefully accepted half of my skipper's pasty, made by his wife, and full of beef.

So here is my recipe, based on Canadian food values.

CORNISH STYLE PASTIES

In a chilled bowl combine 4 cups pastry flour, 2 teaspoons salt and ¾-lb. of chilled lard cut into small dice. Work the lard and flour together with the fingertips into a coarse meal texture. Add 10 tablespoons ice-water, work on the pastry and gather into a ball.

If it's flakey, add more ice-water, one teaspoon at a time, until it anneals. Roll out, divide into six equal-sized balls, coat each with pastry flour, wrap each in paper and refrigerate for a minimum of one hour. And meanwhile work on the filling.

Into a large bowl, place two pounds of lean beef cut into ¼-inch dice, five medium-sized potatoes peeled and cubed to about the same size, one large Spanish onion chopped fine, and a diced yellow turnip a bit bigger than a grapefruit, that has been peeled.

The yellow turnip is what in Britain is called a Swede, and is grown as animal feed. Properly, it is a rutabaga. But it is fine in this recipe, although if you have access to white turnips you can use them instead.

Season this mix in the bowl with a scant tablespoon of salt, one teaspoon black pepper, and a dash each of thyme, dried mint and tarragon. Gently mix and leave at kitchen temperature to blend flavors.

Now comes assembly time, a very important step.

Roll out a ball at a time to a circle roughly nine inches across and about ¼-inch thick, and using a nine-inch plate cut into a perfect round, put 1½ cups of the mix in the centre, and bring the pastry up from each side. Double seal the pastry over the top of the mix, so the doubled seam is on top, and it is all thoroughly crimped so that not even a puff of steam is allowed to escape.

I find this easier if I roll out the pastry on a clean and floured tea towel, so that when I bring up one side, and then the other, I can do so by lifting the sides up, supported by the towel.

Each pasty, when it is correctly and firmly sealed, can be put on an ungreased baking sheet and baked in a preheated 400-degree oven for about 45 minutes.

Each should be evenly browned, and sound a little hollow when rapped by a knuckle.

A well-made pasty is a meal in itself, to be eaten in the hands, wrapped in a napkin, starting from one end so the subtle juices don't escape. But they can be served hot, on a hot platter with a green vegetable, or maybe a salad.

They can be eaten hot at home, or as the perfect picnic meal outside, be that in a cold, hardrock mine, or at the mid-point of a hiking or cross-country skiing trail.

Don't become horrified, but as a Southeastern English Celt, I like a pasty the same way as my Celtic brothers in Devon and Cornwall. That is I bite off one end of a cold one, fill it with heavy cream, and munch my way down in sheer content.

Don't knock it, just try it.

dear abby

Good Marks Just For Showing Up?

DEAR ABBY: I live in Jacksonville, N.C., and want to know what you think about the system used here to get kids to attend school.

If a student attends class every day for six weeks straight, he will receive two extra points during that grading period.

Seniors who attend classes for the entire year without missing one day will be excused from taking final examinations.

I think this is a good idea because it's an incentive for kids to go to school. My dad disagrees with me. He says it's bribery. What do you think?

JACKSONVILLE STUDENT

DEAR STUDENT: A student's grades should reflect his scholastic ability which has nothing to do with his record of attendance.

Rewarding students with a higher grade for merely showing up every day makes their grades phony.

Also, allowing seniors to skip final examinations as a reward for perfect attendance would discriminate against those who have been absent for legitimate reasons.

I'm all for giving kids an incentive for attending school regularly, but upping their grades strikes me as a poor idea.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Lance Ramsey, and my Daddy bet me $20 to $2 there are no professional basketball players under 6 feet tall. I say there are.

Please answer as quick as you can because I want to know who wins. Thank you.

BELVEDERE

DEAR LANCE: It's only a shot in the dark, but I'd say you win. Now, if there are any professional basketball players out there who are under 6 feet tall, please write in. I need to document my shot.

DEAR ABBY: There is no reason for doctors' waiting rooms to be constantly crowded with patients who sit for hours because they're afraid if they leave for a few minutes they'll lose their turn.

In Sweden they give numbers to patients as they come in. If your number is, say, 30, you know you have time to go out and do something else.

DEAR T.C.: They do. In bakeries. (Smart cookies?)

Buyer Beware

CANTERBURY, England (CP) — Shoppers at markets in Kent were recently warned not to buy so-called bargain cans of red salmon costing about $1. Inside were baked beans.

KING NEPTUNE'S EGG SALAD

¼ cup mayonnaise (or salad dressing)

1 tbsp. cider vinegar

2 tbsp. finely chopped green onion

2 tsp. finely chopped dill pickle

¾ tsp salt (or to taste)

½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce

Dash pepper

1 cup shrimp (or use crab, tuna, or salmon), well drained (defrosted if frozen)

1 tsp. lemon juice

5 hard-cooked eggs, shelled; cut in large chunks

⅔ cup thinly sliced celery (cut on the bias)

⅓ cup finely chopped green pepper

2 tbsp. thinly sliced radished

Lettuce leaves

Tomato wedges (garnish)

Parsley sprigs (garnish)

Sliced ripe olives (garnish).

In bowl, thoroughly combine mayonnaise, cider vinegar, green onion, dill pickle, salt, Worcestershire sauce, and pepper. Cut eggs into chunks; add to dressing mixture. Sprinkle lemon juice over shrimp (or other seafood). Add to eggs and dressing along with celery, green pepper, and radishes. Mix well. Cover; refrigerate. To serve, line a salad bowl with bed of lettuce. Mound salad mixture in centre. Garnish with tomato wedges and parsley sprigs. Sprinkle sliced olives over top if desired. Makes four meal-size servings.

Be Careful With Parsnips

A few days of low humidity and rainless nights soon bring a patch of half-prepared soil into condition for sowing seeds. But the seeds can only be those which are known to like present conditions.

The most commonly grown vegetable to sow in mid-February is the parsnip. Although needing a nine to 11-month growth period, parsnips have a wide range of uses once they reach maturity at the first sharp frost of fall.

The same weather which signals an ideal sowing date for parsnips seed also starts new growth signs at the crown of those still in the garden. When tiny yellowish-green sprouting is visible on parsnips, they are no longer a desirable or, indeed, a safe food for the family. Some members may react with upsets from eating them; others may not have any bad effects.

Chemicals in the roots change from storage to growth components, and just as sprouting potatoes and carrots lose their best flavor and nutrition, so do parsnips. It surprises me that more notice is not taken of the possible ill effects from eating parsnips than from having a meal of potatoes, carrots and onions which have already started new growth. Very little factual information is available on this, but from apparently reliable source contacts, we feel it necessary to pass along a warning. Use the vegetables freely while in good condition, but be wary when past their prime.

To grow seeds of parsnips into fine tender roots, the soil needs to be deeply dug. If done earlier, it now needs breaking down.

Use a three- or four-pronged cultivator. Notice if fresh compost is needed, either for depth or for greater moisture holding. Some soils will be improved for deep-rooting vegetables if coarse sand is also cultivated into the mix. The 10- to 12-inch edible root portion of parsnips (and six- to eight-inch on carrots) must be able to penetrate downwards as they grow, without interruption of either lumps of clay or of stones. Both these impediments cause distortion of the roots and consequent loss of edible portions.

When the soil patch is readied, it should be allowed to settle for a few days if possible. But if wet weather is threatening, a little firming can be done and the seeds sown at once.

A broad plank over the patch will do enough firming by being normally stepped on as pressure. If you have no plank, step along the rows with normal light footsteps — no tramping at this season because the soil is quite wet below.

Now, to get deep rooting for long parsnips, use an inch-wide stout stick and drive it into the soil to make holes 12 inches deep, about a foot apart. Wiggle stick in each hole to be sure it stays open and is wider at the top than at the bottom. Fill each hole to the surface with a prepared sifted mixture of soil from the compost heap and a little sand. This should be slightly damp so it will drop to the bottom of each hole.

On the surface of each filled hole, sow three parsnips seeds in a triangle. Cover with a sprinkling of compost and press with fingers to make contact between soil and seeds.

When germination occurs, remove weakest seedling at each hole. Then later, about April 1, remove the weaker of two remaining. Thus you have one strong seedling growing in each prepared deep hole. There will be no crowding and no thinning all through the season.

The parsnips may not be the largest you have seen, but they will be the best you have grown. Deep watering is needed, starting during May, for the soil down there in the 12-inch roothole must not become totally dry at any time of the parsnip's growing season.

Sewage Ploy 'Dirty Pool'

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Salt Spring Island appears about to get a new sewage treatment system. But a vocal group claims the plant, with a stage one price tag of $2.4 million and rising, is not wanted by the majority of islanders and is being pushed solely to further business interests in Ganges.

A number of Salt Spring Island residents are angry and frustrated at the tactics used by the Capital Region District to get a sewer system installed in the Ganges area.

Members of a loosely-knit group called the Concerned Citizens Committee are accusing the district of "dirty pool" in getting the go-ahead for the system.

They will meet Thursday with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, MLA for the area.

They realize the necessity of having a collection and disposal system in Ganges village but they are opposed to having it extend to other residential properties which already have functioning septic systems.

They claim the financial burden the residents — many of whom are old age pensioners and others on fixed incomes — will face as a result of the proposed sewer will force many of them to move off the island.

"We object to the fact that we are being asked to pay for something we don't want, something that we can't afford," said Fred Sibley, a member of the committee and an old-age pensioner.

"It is going to drive a lot of old people from their homes."

The trials and tribulations of the sewer system for Ganges go back a long time but the latest chapter in the story began last July when the regional district circulated a petition to gauge the feelings of islanders about a proposed secondary sewage treatment plant.

The system was to cost $2.3 million and be installed in two phases, the first of which would include the Ganges area.

In October, before the petition was complete, a number of residents asked that the petition be scrapped because canvassers had given out misleading information and in some cases resorted to intimidation.

But the petition was not scrapped and a short while later the district announced that 68.2 per cent of the residents in the area to be sewered had voted in favor.

The Concerned Citizens Committee challenged the district's figure, eventually got its hands on the petition and did its own analysis.

The committee members discovered what they considered to be a number of irregularities in the signatures on the petition and they estimated the correct total of those in favor of the sewer system was about 47.3 per cent.

They wanted a recount but were told the only recourse they had was to the courts. They hired a lawyer and were prepared to file a statement of claim with the district but were asked by district officials to hold off pending further study of the petition by district officials.

The next move came Jan. 11 when CRD executive director Dennis Young wrote to the Pollution Control Branch asking the branch to issue an order requiring the installation of a sewage system for the phase-one section which includes the Ganges area.

Branch director William Venables wrote back Jan. 17 saying such an order was being issued.

"In accordance with the wishes of your board, it has been decided that this letter constitutes an order which exempts you from requiring the assent of the owner-electors under Section 253 of the Municipal Act," Venables said.

In effect, the district threw out the petition, ignored the opinions of the residents and moved to put in the sewer system regardless.

There are about 203 properties in phase one, including 108 residential parcels, 36 vacant lots and 42 commercial properties.

Regional district officials say 80 per cent of the property owners in the phase-one section voted in favor of the sewer on the petition but the committee says its study shows even the district's calculations only provide a 61-per-cent vote. According to the committee's calculations, the percentage is about 53 per cent.

The committee members are asking why the district, if it got 68.2 per cent in favor of both phase one and phase two of the sewer project, didn't go ahead rather than ask for an order from the PCB for the sewer.

"Obviously there is something wrong (with the petition)," said Art Lloyd, another committee member, and an unsuccessful candidate in the race for Island director on the regional board in last November's municipal election.

"As far as I'm concerned, I don't like the tactics."

He said there are regulations to ensure that citizens are fairly treated and by bypassing those protective measures, the district has mistreated the residents of Salt Spring.

He added it may be necessary on occasion to order the PCB to take action but not in this case. He said it is up to local MLAs like Curtis to see that this kind of trammeling on citizens' rights doesn't happen again.

The committee members also question the estimated cost of the sewer.

The original estimate for both phases was $2.3 million and now the district says just the first phase is going to cost $2.4 million.

Lloyd owns a nine-suite apartment building which he bought in 1974. It is in the area to be sewered and he says according to the district's figures he will be charged $236 as an installation fee plus $180 each month once the system is in place.

His existing septic tank system works perfectly well, he said, and has only cost him $120 since he bought the place.

"The whole thing has certainly been politically and economically motivated," Sibley said.

"Why should we subsidize big business?" he said, adding that it is the Ganges business community which will benefit most from the improvements.

He said perhaps the district has a plan whereby residents won't have as heavy a financial burden to carry as they have been led to believe.

"If there is such a plan I wish they would tell us and get us off the hook because we are living in jeopardy of having to move."

Court Hears Details Of Raped Boy's Death

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury heard a detailed account Tuesday from a Metropolitan Toronto policeman of how a 12-year-old shoe-shine boy was sexually assaulted and killed last summer.

Sgt. Gerald Stevenson read from an interview he had with Saul David Betesh, one of four men charged with the first-degree murder, several hours after the body of Emmanuel Jaques was found on the roof of a downtown building.

Betesh, 27, Josef Woods, 27, and Werner Gruener, 29, have pleaded not guilty. Robert Wayne Kribs, 29, has entered a guilty plea.

The interview took place Aug. 1 at an apartment in the building where the body was found. Kribs, Gruener and Woods rented the apartment.

Previous testimony has shown that the boy went to the apartment to pose for photographs.

In his statement to police, Betesh said that during the sexual assault, he gagged the boy because he was crying with pain.

"Then Stretcher (Kribs's nickname) and Joe left and I stayed with him to calm him down and he agreed to go on with the action," Betesh said in the statement.

Betesh said he let the boy go to the washroom, accompanied by Kribs. Kribs came back to the bedroom with the boy and told the others to leave, Betesh said.

Betesh said Kribs called to them after 10 or 15 minutes and said the boy was not cooperating. At that time, Kribs, Betesh and Gruener discussed whether they should kill Emmanuel and decided to drug him.

The three men gave sleeping pills to the boy in an attempt to calm him but they had no effect, Betesh told police.

Betesh said he and Kribs committed the actual murder but all four men hid the body. He said he attempted to choke Emmanuel with a string.

"After two or three minutes, Joe came in and I said, 'I can't do it.' The kid at this time was semi-conscious.

"Joe suggested I put a pillow over his face so I wouldn't see his face."

Betesh's said he and Kribs then carried the boy over to the sink, held his face under water for several minutes and left him there.

"Then we went and sat in the living room. Joe came in and made a rude joke about the kid wanting a shampoo."

The statement said the men then left the body underneath some stairs and went to a restaurant for breakfast.

The next day they placed the body in an air-conditioning duct on the roof and Werner, Kribs and Woods left for Vancouver, the statement said. Betesh said he promised to join them later.

The trial continues.

Ford Sued For Defect

OTTAWA (CP) — When David Woodcock tried to turn left into a parking lot in the summer of 1976, his 1971 Ford Custom went out of control and came to rest against the curb while oncoming traffic swerved to avoid him.

"I just sat in the car for a few minutes, I guess sort of recovering from the shock," he told the first day of the trial of Ford Motor Co. of Canada on a charge of failure to notify owners of an alleged steering defect.

Ford is charged under a section of the federal Motor Vehicle Safety Act which makes it an offence not to notify owners of a defect in a vehicle "that affects or is likely to affect" its safe operation.

The trial is expected to take up to three weeks and Crown prosecutor Gerald McCracken has said he may call up to 50 witnesses in the case, the first time a charge has been laid under the act since it took effect in 1971.

Woodcock was one of three drivers who told the court Monday how they had lost full control of the steering of their cars and had difficulty making turns.

Transport department investigator, John Woolford, who began looking into the matter in 1974, said the problem centres on a sealed, self-lubricating joint or bushing in the idler arm, a part of the steering assembly which is attached to the frame of the car.

Over time, the bushing can seize and as the steering assembly is continuously moved, the idler arm eventually will pull completely away from the frame, ripping the metal with it and leaving two quarter-sized holes.

This will cause loss of steering control, especially when there is a simultaneous braking and turning motion.

The charge as first laid covered about one million full-sized Fords of model years 1965-73 inclusive. But the period was reduced to 1971-73 after a judge ruled at the end of a preliminary hearing last May that it should cover only the period for when the law was in effect.

Conviction carries a maximum fine of $10,000.

Ford has said in previous statements that the problem with the idler arm would be noticed during routine maintenance checks and that it "does not constitute a safety hazard."

But the court heard evidence from mechanic Ken McDonald, a partner in a garage specializing in front-end work, that it might be difficult to spot such a potential problem.

McDonald said he had replaced hundreds of idler arms which had worn out on all makes of vehicles.

But most of those were obvious because they could be seen to be loose while the car was up on the hoist.

The seized Ford idler arm would appear stiff and to the mechanic who had little experience with the problem, it might go unnoticed.

Active Volcanoes Blamed for Cold

WASHINGTON (WP) — The freezing temperatures and heavy snows of this winter may have their origins in the fact that the world's volcanoes erupted last year with three times the frequency that they did in 1976.

The two biggest eruptions, one last March on the Kamchatka Peninsula in the Soviet Union and the other last August in Usu, Japan, sent dust and ash so high that the debris is still circling the world in the upper atmosphere. In all, there were 28 new volcanic eruptions in 1977 and at least seven others that began in 1976 and continued through a good part of 1977.

"It's been an idea since the time of Benjamin Franklin that volcanic eruptions precede cold and wet weather," said Dartmouth College's Dr. Robert Decker, who is on sabbatical leave at the University of Hawaii studying the phenomenon. "There seems little question that when the fine dust from big eruptions get into the global stratosphere it can form an opaque layer to keep some of the sunshine out."

Franklin was ambassador to France at the end of the Revolutionary War when an enormous eruption in Iceland sent a volcanic fog over North America and Europe. It was followed by two of the coldest winters in that era. Franklin wrote a paper in 1783 in which he theorized that the volcanic haze kept enough sunlight out to make temperatures colder.

Almost two centuries later, Dartmouth's Decker has set out to prove whether or not Franklin was right. Decker is being joined in the attempt by a growing number of climatologists, including Dr. James Kennett, of the University of Rhode Island and Dr. S. Reid Bryson of the University of Wisconsin and Stephen H. Schneider of the National Centre of Atmospheric Research in Boulder, Colo.

"Volcanoes cause cooling, we're pretty sure of it now," Schneider said in an interview.

Farms Feed Wealthy

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Residents of the Third World are going hungry so Canadians can have strawberries in December, Susan George, an agricultural economist from France, said Tuesday.

Speaking at the University of Western Ontario, Mrs. George said the best and most productive farmland of Third World countries is used to grow crops for North Americans instead of for domestic markets.

The result is that local inhabitants are going without, she said.

Production of most of the world's food is in the hands of a minority of managers interested only in profit, said Mrs. George.

She said the multinational corporations have chosen the Third World because of cheaper labor and year-round growing conditions, adding that companies are applying North American farming techniques to these countries with disastrous social effects.

Techniques requiring machinery, large tracts of land and chemical fertilizers require money, she said, so that only the wealthy farmers can use them. Poorer farmers are being forced off their land because they cannot compete.

Projects Vital: Bonner

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Bonner, chairman of British Columbia Hydro, says a 10-year moratorium on major energy projects as proposed by the New Democratic Party "would take you to brown-out and from brown-out to black-out for many sectors of the province."

Bonner said in an interview Hydro experts have made and are continuing to make careful studies of the future power needs of B.C., and their present projection is that Hydro's load growth is at a six-to-seven per cent annual rate.

"This means that the power requirement in the province is doubling possibly every 12 years," he said. "To do nothing for 10 years would provide a gap for which no answers could be provided in the short term."

Since it takes a minimum of 10 years' lead time for any major project, Bonner said, Hydro must move ahead with its planning of projects.

Lorne Nicolson (NDP—Nelson-Creston) recently said his party wants an inquiry, along with the moratorium, to determine just what Hydro's exact expansion needs are. He said Hydro is increasing its rates to the public while proceeding with projects — which entail heavy borrowing — that may not be necessary.

Bonner said Hydro's biggest current project, the Revelstoke Dam, is necessary. He said the Hat Creek coal-fired thermal project is still under planning, but that a go-ahead decision on it by Hydro directors is not likely until the end of 1978.

Hydro experts are examining the possible use at a Hat Creek plant of new technology for turning coal into electricity in a way that greatly reduces the need for costly pollution-control equipment, Bonner said. The saving, through using a United States-originated "fluidized bed combustion" system, could be as much as $400 million, he said.

Another project under consideration is installing a cable from the B.C. mainland to take power to Vancouver Island, but Bonner said the cable might not have to cross Lasqueti Island, as earlier announced.

Bonner said it's possible Hydro will be able to avoid the island and splice the cable at a man-made "splice island" similar to a Texas tower drilling platform. Lasqueti residents have opposed the cable.

Bonner also said studies are continuing of the proposed Site C power dam on the Peace River. He said that while it remains an attractive project "we have made no determination for or against it."

Bonner defended Hydro borrowing, pointing out that the Crown corporation must borrow to pay for its projects — or else have a rate structure so high that it has enough profit to make borrowing unnecessary.

To a suggestion Hydro might reduce its expansion requirements by discouraging heavy power use through high rates for high usage, Bonner said he is "not certain how far you can decently go in the direction of discouraging use."

"If you want to get into the area of positive discouragement not associated with scarcity, there should be some legislative move in that direction," he said. "It is really not the business of a public utility to tell the public, if they have the electricity, that they ought not to use it.

Bonner said he believes Hydro has a "pretty good handle" on internally restraining its cost, but added that it is largely at the mercy of external inflationary forces, such as those increasing taxes, supplies, equipment and labor costs.

Bonner said he still thinks, as he has been saying for months, that Hydro will have to start looking at nuclear power possibilities in about 10 years.

"We will have to start looking at it simply because our hydro projects may be foreclosed by environmental considerations," he said. "If we could use it all (B.C.'s hydro-electric sites) we have about 50 years of water left. But we can't use the Fraser River, for example, because of the salmon; many other sites are too isolated and the load loss would be too great, to say nothing of the cost of development."

Research Award to UVic Astronomer

A University of Victoria astronomer studying old stars has won a National Research Council annual award.

Dr. F.D. Hartwick of the UVic physics department has been awarded one of two 1978 Steacie Fellowships. The other went to Dr. W.R. Peltier, a geophysicist at the University of Toronto.

The fellowship will free Hartwick from classroom teaching for one year begining in July and his university salary will be paid by the NRC.

He has been an associate professor at UVic since 1972 and holds a Ph.D. in astronomy from the University of Toronto.

Hartwick began studying old stars when he started at UVic as an assistant professor in 1968 and has made a decisive impact over the last 10 years in the field of stellar and galactic evolution.

The two galaxies Hartwick is concentrating on, in addition to the Milky Way, are the Magellanic Clouds and the Andromeda galaxy, which can be seen from Victoria in the fall.

A powerful telescope at the La Serena observatory in Chile must be used to oserve the Magellanic Clouds. Hartwick also uses telescopes at Mount Palomar in California and Kitt Peak in Arizona.

Under the fellowship, Hartwick will travel to observe old stars and learn about early celestial conditions after the "Big Bang" — the name given to the current theory of how the universe began.

Scientists believe that all the matter in the universe was once contained in a very hot, highly condensed, concentrated point, 10,000 times hotter than the centre of the sun.

It exploded, expanded rapidly, then cooled. Some of the lighter-weight elements like helium were formed during the cooling process, according to the theory.

Lights Go Out In Town Protest

WESTWOOD, Calif. — Chilly but happy, huddled near wood stoves and kerosene lamps, most of the 2,000 people in this mountain village are determined to stick out a self-imposed week without electricity.

Their refusal to use lights, heaters, televisions or appliances started Sunday at noon as a protest against high power costs.

"We are people who know what we are doing," Ron Biggs, 46, said Tuesday while cocking an ear toward howling winds outside.

As night fell Tuesday, the only lights glowing in this isolated town 320 kilometres northeast of San Francisco were four on the outside of the California-Pacific Utility Co. building, whose bills led to the protest.

Patty McCormac, one of the protest organizers, said the step back into the 19th century was not taken lightly.

"Don't get us wrong. This blackout is a very serious thing. There's nothing funny about utility bills that have doubled and tripled in the past year."

Residents speak of monthly bills as high as $113. For some, that is almost half of their unemployment benefits. Westwood has a winter unemployment rate of about 80 per cent when the primary industry, lumber, shuts down.

LAKE CHARLES, La. — Country music singer Lynn Anderson was married Tuesday to Harold Stream, a wealthy Lake Charles oilman, in a private ceremony at Stream's home.

It was the second marriage for both. Miss Anderson's seven-year-old daughter, Lisa, was a bridesmaid at the wedding.

Long-Distance Rescue

VANCOUVER — Two Vancouver ham radio operators combined with a colleague 15,000 kilometres away Tuesday to help a French sailor lying comatose on a freighter in the Indian Ocean.

The incident began Tuesday morning when Vic Waters, a radio personality and longtime ham operator, heard a faint call on his set.

"He couldn't speak English well at all," Waters said later. "All I could make out was something like 'We need help very bad for very sick man on ship.' "

Waters called upon neighbor and fellow ham Gerry Descantes, who is fluent in French. He discovered the call was coming from the French freighter Onyx in the Indian Ocean en route to Port of Moroni on the Comorros Islands.

The radio operator had tried normal ship radio procedure to get help for a stricken shipmate but when he got no reply, he switched to a ham frequency.

Waters and Descantes knew there was no active ham on the Comorros, so Descantes raised one on Reunion Island, also in the Indian Ocean. That ham knew the frequency for the tower at Port of Moroni. He passed the word to authorities and a fast launch was sent to assist.

Narrow Loss for Bella In Congressional Bid

NEW YORK — The political career of Bella Abzug is in limbo today following her narrow loss to an obscure Republican who overcame both the former U.S. representative's celebrity status and a 3-to-1 Democratic registration edge.

Mrs. Abzug — who in the last 18 months was defeated in primary bids for the U.S. Senate and mayor — lost the race to succeed Mayor Edward Koch in the House of Representatives to William Green, 48.

Green's previous stints in public office were limited to a term as a state assemblyman in the late 1960s and seven years as regional director of housing and urban development.

The victory margin, however, was close — 1,270 votes of about 60,000 votes cast. Mrs. Abzug, 57, said she will ould await the results of a recount scheduled for later this week before commenting on the outcome. Green noted that the routine recount usually verifies the unofficial tally.

For much of Tuesday night, it looked as though Mrs. Abzug was headed to Washington to serve out the term until the end of this year. The Associated Press and other news outlets in New York called Mrs. Abzug the winner of the election before 10 p.m., when she led Green by 59 per cent to 39 per cent with about 20 per cent of the vote counted.

Green slowly dissolved the percentage lead, although Mrs. Abzug held a slim lead until 99 per cent of the votes were counted.

News Award For Cronkite

NEW YORK — Walter Cronkite has been cited by the Dupont-Columbia Awards in Broadcast Journalism as a "particularly eloquent and effective spokesman for the demanding profession of TV newsman."

Cronkite and his CBS news team led the list of winners Tuesday night of the awards and citations for "distinction and excellence in news reporting and public affairs."

Three Days On Cross To Cure 'Possession'

ROSARIO DO SUL, Brazil — A 16-year-old girl who said she was possessed by demons spent three days strapped to a cross in this southern Brazilian city as police stood by and several thousand persons paraded past the scene.

Eliana Maciel Barbosa carried the 20-kilogram, 5.5-metre cross for 32 kilometres Friday to Serra de Cavera, near here, and was strapped to it by her father Joao Barbosa and her boyfriend Jose Luis de Lima, police said.

The girl asked to be nailed to the cross rather than tied, but police would not allow it, published reports say.

Thousands passed in front of the girl, dressed in a long white gown, and many fell to their knees praying.

"It's all over — I am free from bad spirits now," she said Tuesday as she rested in her home in this city 960 kilometres south of Rio de Janeiro. She did not elaborate on her alleged possession by demons.

NOON BOOM

An electronically fired cannon that will boom at noon every day is to be set up outside the Laurel Point hotel as part of the Captain Cook Bi-centennial festivities.

Ald. Bill Tindall said today Victoria council accepted the offer of a cannon, made by Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., but only after making sure the noise won'tdisturb residents in the area.

Tindall said the city has been assured that with the cannon pointed north, the sound will travel out across the harbor and won't bother people living in the Laurel Point area.

He said the cannon will stay in service after this year's Captain Cook celebrations, becoming a permanent Victoria fixture.

Smith Near Pact

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Black and white Rhodesian leaders today announced they had reached agreement in principle on the major points of a constitutional settlement and were within days of setting up a transitional government designed to lead the country to black majority rule.

Premier Ian Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Chief Jeremiah Chirau and Elliott Gabellah, who was representing Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, told reporters after the 37th round of the so-called internal settlement talks that they had solved their differences over the key issue of white representation in a Zimbabwe parliament.

All four walked together, smiling and chatting, out of a red-brick suburban mansion where the talks have been taking place to give the news to reporters.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the state department said the agreement appeared unacceptable to the United States because it was made without the participation of the guerrilla group.

U.S. Coal Strike Talks Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks in the 72-day U.S. coal strike will begin at the White House tonight after industry officials at first refused, then accepted President Carter's call to reconvene the negotiations.

The industry's acceptance came hours after company negotiators had rejected Carter's request, made Tuesday. The president also held out the threat of stronger measures to end the strike.

A statement by the Bituminous Coal Operators Association (BCOA) said the decision to attend the White House negotiations was made after the industry was assured of "appropriate conditions" for the resumptions of talks.

Woman Attacked In Drugs Demand

A woman night attendant at a home for the mentally handicapped was attacked and threatened early today by two men in ski masks who demanded money and drugs.

The intruders fled after holding Mrs. Donalda Mills for three quarters of an hour at the Springwood group home, off Mt. Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck and kicked but not seriously injured and returned to complete her shift after a checkup at hospital.

A cashbox containing $15 was stolen after drawers and cupboards were ransacked without disclosing any drugs other than household medication.

Saanich police and North Saanich RCMP set up roadblocks shortly after the woman reported the robbery at 12:15 a.m. but no suspects were found.

Ralph Vipond, administrator of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, which operates the home, said the incident took place without arousing any of the 22 adult residents.

"She (Mrs. Mills) talked them down," he said.

But when the men discovered the box contained only $15 they threw her down and kicked her.

Mrs. Mills, a program worker at the home, said the men were young and not too abusive.

"There could have been a lot of damage done at that place. They were very considerate in that fashion,"she said today.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck in the face and kicked. The attack left her bruised and bleeding with one eye puffed up and an injury to a wrist and hand.

The residence consists of a main building containing bedrooms, activity area and office. A separate building houses the kitchen and Vipond said it was while the attendant was walking between the two structures that she was seized.

The doors would have been locked had she been inside, he said.

He said the society is considering a burglar alarm system and employing a second person for overnight surveillance.

Vipond said police make one nightly check of the premises.

HUNGRY ELK 'WON'T STARVE'

A spokesman for British Columbia's recreation and conservation ministry gave his guarantee Wednesday that hundreds of hungry elk in the East Kootenay area won't starve to death because of a lack of hay.

"Those elk are being fed and they'll continue to be fed," said Walter Donald, assistant to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

Donald said in an interview he didn't known how the fish and wildlife branch would be given the additional funds it needs to carry out its feeding of the elk, but the government would find a way to maintain the program.

Donald made the announcement after Carmen Purdy, president of the East Kootenay Wildlife Association, complained that the elk were starving to death and threatened to dump the first dead elk on the steps of the legislature to bring attention to the problem.

'SHOWCASE' PACT SOUGHT

Premiers Clash Over Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Government leaders clashed on the controversial issues of housing and transportation policy today as they struggled to come up with specific proposals to help the economy.

As their three-day economic conference drew to a close, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque accused the federal government of bungling housing grants to the provinces. And premiers from both east and west attacked the so-called user-pay formula for transportation payments advocated by Transport Minister Otto Lang. (See other stories on the conference on page 12).

However, the first ministers seem eager to wrap up their economic summit conference with at least one showcase agreement on a project or plan to stimulate the economy and create jobs quickly.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, who is pushing big energy projects, told reporters the conference should come up with a project of the "lighthouse variety" to lead the way.

A new venture such as developing a heavy oil plant in the West or going ahead with East Coast Fundy tidal power would serve the bill and help out some of the nearly one million unemployed.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said "we will have made real progress if we come up with even one major project."

They would provide mainly temporary jobs and not cure unemployment once and for all, he said, and it would put a strain on capital markets to the expense of other policy areas.

"The siren song of a series of massive projects and immediate jobs may be politically sexy," Bennett added, "but it is not the whole answer. There has to be balance in our approach."

HUBBARD ORDERED JAILED

PARIS (AFP) — Ron Hubbard, American founder of the Church of Scientology, has been sentenced to four years imprisonment and fined 35,000 francs ($7,000) for fraudulently obtaining funds.

The judge issued a warrant for the arrest of Hubbard who is reported to live aboard a luxury yacht in the Atlantic ocean.

Hubbard was tried in his absence.

PM BLOWS UP AT LEVESQUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lost his temper during closed discussions with Quebec Premier Rene Levesque on the federal system of housing grants, and on dairy policy, provincial sources said today.

Their dispute, which erupted at a dinner meeting Tuesday night of Trudeau and the 10 premiers, blew up again today at the federal-provincial economic conference.

Levesque told the meeting that Quebec lost $64 million in federal housing grants last year because of Ouellet's rigid approach and bureaucratic red tape.

Ouellet retorted that Quebec lost out on the funds because the Quebec Housing Corp., a Crown agency, "is a white elephant that moves at a turtle's pace."

The premier said Ouellet's tone likely "has a foretaste of speeches we will hear in comong months" — a reference to an expected federal election this year.

Following the dinner at Trudeau's home, Levesque said it appeared the federal government was staging the conference largely for electioneering purposes.

It appeared the premiers wanted to keep a tight lid on the fact that the dispute had occurred.

B.C. Oil Find A Bonanza

A significant oil discovery near Fort St. John could increase B.C.'s crude oil production by 10 per cent before the end of 1979, a spokesman for Home Oil Ltd. of Calgary said today.

The company said its subsidiary, Scurry-Rainbow, is developing an oil find that could produce 4,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

At the present level of development, it is producing 1,000 barrels per day. The crude is being trucked to the Trans Mountain pipeline for delivery to refineries in the Vancouver area.

The discovery has created excitement among major oil companies who bid a record $57 million at the winter sale of oil land rights in the area.

The discovery at Eagle, 40 kilometres north of Fort St. John, was made in October, 1976.

But because of government regulations regarding disclosure, no announcement could be made for one year. In October, 1977, the company announced it had discovered oil but no one outside government and industry circles sought details.

"There was too much excitement about big discoveries in Alberta," said Ian Doig, manager of corporate affairs for Home Oil Ltd.

"In a quieter time there would have been a lot of publicity about something like this."

He said people became interested when major oil companies started bidding for land this winter.

"Yesterday and today the phone has just kept ringing," he said.

B.C.'s crude oil resources had been declining until the Scurry-Rainbow discovery.

The company has 13 wells already in place and plans many more. Within 18 months it expects production to be up to 4,000 barrels per day, which might be the upper limit of the present find.

However, the company plans a vigorous exploration program in hopes of finding additional oil.

He said chances are strong for additional discoveries both by Scurry-Rainbow and other exploration firms.

CANCER TEAM GETS CASH

A provincial government cut of $1.3 million in the Cancer Control Agency budget has been restored.

Jim Gilmore, spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association, said Health Minister Bob McClelland had ordered the CCA to cut 10 per cent of its budget several months ago.

Gilmore said the CCA made representation to the minister last November, resulting in the cut being rescinded this week.

Dollar Takes Beating

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar took a heavy beating on the New York money markets Tuesday, closing at a three-month low of $89.75 U.S. cents in hectic trading.

The dollar opened at 90.07 U.S. cents and steadily lost ground throughout the day, dropping by more than a third of a cent by closing time.

A currency trader for the Bank of Montreal attributed the fall to medium-sized commercial selling of the Canadian dollar, by investment houses.

He added that rumours some investment houses have revised their predictions on how far the dollar will fall may also be a factor.

"At the root of it all is a continued lack of confidence in the Canadian economy," he said.

February is traditionally a bad month for the dollar because of the number of Canadian tourists spending money abroad.

Last winter, Canadians spent $1 billion abroad while non-Canadian tourists in Canada were spending $192 million.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-20 at $0.8980. Pound sterling was down 3-10 at $1.9340.

Military Colleges Admit Women

Women are to be admitted to Canada's three military colleges.

Defence Minister Barney Danson announced the plan Tuesday and said the first step will be to appoint women to the advisory boards of Royal Roads Military College here in Victoria, the Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont., and St. Jean College de Militaire in St. Jean, Que.

Col. J.H. Roddick, commandant of Royal Roads, said the addition of women will not pose any serious problems.

He said when U.S. military academies first admitted women they tried to segregate them by placing them in separate wings of dormitories. This has since been changed, he said, and women now have their own rooms and washrooms scattered throughout the various dormitories.

"The pysical fitness program might have to be adjusted. There may have to be some acceptable alternatives," he said.

Rear-Admiral R.W. Murdoch (Rtd.) is regional chairman of the Royal Roads sub-committee on the advisory board.

Murdoch said the minister indicated he will appoint women to the board quickly.

"The move is in tune with the times. He (the minister) will be looking for well-qualified women in the academic and professional fields."

Murdoch said the United States has had women in its military academies for the past two years.

Canadian women officers to date have received academic training in civilian colleges through the Regular Officers Training Program.

While more and more job categories are being made available to women in the armed forces they are not eligible to serve in a combat role.

Murdoch said this is not so much a defence department edict as a society decision.

At the present time women officers may serve as engineers, except aboard ships.

They may also serve as logistic officers, doctors and dentists and other roles connected with the two professions, security officers, personnel support officers and in the field of personnel development, which includes chaplains, social welfare officers and other appointments.

THEY HAD A DREAM

Bit of Kiwiland Touches Down In Metchosin

JOHN
. . . softer climate

BETH
. . . trial, error

Dreams can be curious things sometimes.

You have visions of doing or going or maybe of becoming . . . something, and when they are shattered you look for something else.

A year or two ago, John and Beth Dickman, a couple of latter-day Metchosin pioneers, had hopes of moving to New Zealand to live. They planned to buy land and start a nut farm, something quite new to the Down Under nuts.

However, a trip south by Beth and one of their five children revealed that getting into Kiwiland as an immigrant after you've passed the magic age of 40 can be a little tricky to say the least, even if you have the wherewithal (or perhaps only the wherewithmost) to survive.

And so John Dickman, who is retired now after working in logging, for a telephone company and more recently as a nursing orderly in Victoria for 14 years, and his wife decided to stay here instead and build a large solar-heated greenhouse.

Of course, you might say, nodding in an understanding way. Then again, you might say where the hell is the connection!

"It could sound funny," John hesitated, "but we thought if we couldn't go to New Zealand, we'd bring a little bit of New Zealand to us."

Ah, the old Mohammed and the mountain bit. And John explained he meant that by having a large conservatory, which he says is a greenhouse you live in, they would have a softer climate of their own and perhaps a few sub tropical palms to relax under.

When you pop into the smallish house on the stony property on Rocky Point Road, where the Dickmans have lived since 1952, it's easy to see why they need a greenhouse.

There are plants everywhere and you peep between the leaves of a monstrous avacado as you sit and sip mint tea and pour over the architecht's plans, just as they have done for a couple of years.

The whole thing is intriguing: the thought of building something comfortable and extremely livable and heating it with only the rays of the sun.

max low

With the forever rising costs of fuels, of course, solar heat is becoming more interesting to many people but, as Lewis Adamcsak (of Adamson Solar Service) who is helping the Dickmans said, the cost still puts most of them off.

It is expensive. But then, what the Dickmans are building is huge.

The octagon-shaped conservatory is 30 feet in diameter and will have plants winding their way through two floors up to a height of 22 feet at the dome. On the ground floor will be a sauna and a bathing pool, both heated by the sun. An eight-foot by 28-foot link section will join the octagon to the present house, which the addition dwarfs.

The Dickmans reckon the whole thing will cost them between $40,000 and $50,000 but they're quick to point out that it could be done a lot cheaper. They have used only the best materials, sturdy double-layer acrylics, ultra-violet-transmitting plexiglass to aid the ripening process and giant storage tanks to keep the summer sun's warmth until the clouds come along.

The cost was made higher for them also, Beth said, because they had to get along by trial and error and do almost all the research on solar heat themselves.

"Even the people who sold us the plexiglass and the acrylics knew nothing about them," she said. "They just sell them!"

"In Canada you don't get any tax or other incentive breaks, either, for investing in solar heating equipment like you do in the States," John pointed out. "So it's much more expensive up here."

Anyway, for a lifestyle that's going to be vastly different — and a whole lot warmer — they figure the expense is worth it.

Their dreams now are of lettuces growing in mid-winter; of rosy fruit like lemons, oranges, papayas, maybe even avacados, hanging from laden branches; and of a good feeling that comes with being close to nature's greenery — and warm at the same time.

Come back and visit us in April when the work will be finished, the Dickmans invited me. Come back and see it with at least some of the plants in place; with the curious, almost petal-shaped pool completed and (the owners hope) replete with tilapia — fish that eat the algae so you don't have to use chemicals in the water.

Thanks friends, I will. Might even take the opportunity to have my first solar sauna and a dip . . .

. . . Just hope those tilapia are friendly.

Airline Pact Close

A tentative agreement was reached early today between AirWest Airlines Ltd. and employees who have been on strike since Nov. 13.

Company and Teamsters Union negotiators signed the agreement at 5 a.m. following a lengthy bargaining session.

The major hurdle as the bargaining wound down was the wording of a back-to-work agreement.

A spokesman for the employees said a ratification vote will be held Thursday and the result counted that night.

Company president Norm Gold said if the employees ratify the contract, AirWest will begin calling them back to work Friday morning.

Terms of settlement are not being released but negotiators for both sides are recommending acceptance.

Since the strike began, management personnel have been maintaining partial service on the coastal airline which provides harbor-to-harbor flights from Victoria to Vancouver.

Some runs had to be dropped because of the strike and service on others was reduced.

Involved in the dispute are about 90 AirWest pilots, co-pilots, mechanics and service agents.

Woman Loses Suit Against Hospital

A major civil negligence action brought by a 27-year-old Victoria woman against Royal Jubilee Hospital and others has been dismissed in B.C. Supreme Court.

Theresa Anne Worth became paralysed in both legs after jumping from the second floor roof garden of the hospital's Eric Martin Institute Nov. 2, 1973, when she was 23.

The action was heard in court for almost two weeks in the fall of 1976 before Mr. Justice Kirke Smith who reserved judgment. He handed down his written judgment late Tuesday in Vancouver but the decision had not arrived in Victoria.

Had he not dismissed the action, it was learned, damages would have been assessed at $182,000. This means that if the matter goes to the B.C. Court of Appeal and if that court rules in her favor, damages would be $182,000 without the necessity of a retrial for an assessment of damages.

She was admitted to Royal Jubilee Hospital Oct. 23, 1973, as a result of an overdose of sleeping pills and voluntarily agreed to go to the hospital's psychiatric wing, the EMI. Later, it turned out, she had been committed there because her father had signed papers. Her father, Ernest Worth, a maintenance painter at Royal Jubilee, testified he signed committal papers without realizing what they were.

Court was told she wanted to leave EMI, went down one floor on the elevator and walked on to the roof garden after passing a nursing station. She climbed a fence and jumped 29 feet to the ground. As a result, she became paraplegic.

It was not the first time someone had jumped from the roof garden, court was told.

Officials Protest Disclosure Move

Objections from senior Saanich officials that they will suffer a drop in morale if required to file disclosure forms showing their assets and land holdings were dismissed Tuesday night by Saanich aldermen.

TREMAYNE
. . . fears for morale

The legislative committee urged council to establish the requirement for staff disclosures in compliance with the Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act of 1974.

Only Ald. Mary Casilio voted against the motion, although Ald. Fred Severson said he is worried about the possible effect on the management staff's esprit de corps.

If council approves the recommendation, the information provided by senior officials will not be available for public scrutiny. It will be open only to the mayor, council and municipal manager.

The committee's action follows a pledge by Mayor Mel Couvelier in his inaugural address last December, and will make Saanich the third Greater Victoria municipality to adopt the practice.

(Saanich, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, North Saanich and Sidney all passed resolutions in 1974 not to require disclosures from staff members).

In a memorandum to the mayor, municipal manager Bill Tremayne said department heads dislike the proposal for several reasons, including their belief that it questions the honesty of employees and that disclosure would not stop anyone who was intent on being dishonest.

One view expressed was that the measure would not prove effective unless it is all-encompassing, Tremayne said.

However, he said if the practice is to be instituted the information provided should not be made public.

Ald. John Mika said he found that request incredible because it appears to indicate ignorance of the fact the legislation requires only elected officials' disclosures to be made publicly available.

He also dismissed Tremayne's observation that disclosure will not prove effective unless it is all-encompassing. He said no one is naive enough to believe that such action is a guarantee of honesty.

As for the claim of damage to staff morale, Mika said he is not aware that this has happened in municipalities where disclosure by senior officials is required.

"It might improve the morale of ratepayers to know that this very rudimentary step is being taken," he added.

Couvelier said he believes a previous council's decision not to require staff disclosure was an error in judgment.

He said such safeguards, recognizing the potential problems involving staff access to confidential information or advance knowledge of land matters, should not be construed as any reflection on the integrity or honesty of Saanich staff.

Ald. Dave Paterson questioned whether now is the time to require disclosure by senior officials, in view of what he called rumors of low morale problems in the (municipal) hall.

Following council approval, the matter will be referred to the personnel committee so that it can designate those officials who will be required to file disclosure forms.

Scared Woman Bails Out

A 20-year-old View Royal woman hitch-hiker escaped injury when she jumped out of a moving car Tuesday night to avoid the advances of the driver.

Colwood RCMP said the woman was picked up by a man driving a small grey car near McDonald's drive-in on the Island Highway.

She said the car was not travelling fast when she leaped to the road near Four Mile Hill. The car kept going and was sought by police.

Student Job Plan Snared

For the second year running a union wrench has been thrown into the Young Canada Works Program to create summer jobs for students in Saanich.

Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees informed the municipality Tuesday it will not co-sign application forms for the federal youth employment program while layoffs are occurring in the CUPE local and until union men still seeking employment are recalled.

Larry Newman, president of the local representing about 200 municipal staff, also insisted the municipality pay union rates to all persons hired under the program and that they become dues-paying union members.

The base rate for outside staff would be the laborer's rate of $6.93 an hour, and for inside staff $811 per month.

When the union demanded last year that students receive the union rate, the municipality had to supplement program grants by taking $100,000 from its contingency fund.

The committee instructed staff to continue discussing the question with union representatives, and meanwhile to file applications for the program. The deadline for applications is Friday.

Personnel director Arthur Wilks, who expressed the view that the union proposal might be an initial position, noted that under the union's conditions, playground and recreational leaders would receive a daily rate of $37.43.

This, he said, would represent a 66 per cent increase over the $22.50 they received last year.

Ald. Dave Paterson deplored the union's stand but Ald. John Mika said he is not surprised the union would adopt such a position.

He claimed the union was publicly pilloried in the press last year before it even met with the municipal youth employment committee, and had been the target of potshots by certain aldermen.

"Maybe they have taken the position that this year they are not going to be patsies," he said. "Let's have some discussions first before we start slamming people around publicly."

Skateboard Proposal Supported

Saanich's parks and recreation committee recommended Tuesday night that council approve in principle a proposal by two young entrepreneurs to operate a skateboard attraction in Cedar Hill Park, on parkland leased from the municipality.

But aldermen told one of the applicants, Tim Galavan, the committee recommendation does not imply any commitment to proceed with the lease. It merely allows an opportunity to iron out further details with municipal officials, they explained.

CNIB Cafe Snub Jolts B.C. Tel

Telephone union officials met today with Canadian National Institute for the Blind representatives in Vancouver in a bid to resolve a union boycott of the cafeteria in the B.C. Tel building on Yates.

The boycott has surprised, angered and puzzled company officials and the members of the CNIB who run the catering service under contract with the company.

Union members here decided to take the action in retaliation against the CNIB for continuing cafeteria operations during the lockout-strike which ended Monday.

A company spokesman said as far as he knows the boycott is an isolated incident.

Meanwhile, the cafeteria is empty except for the four CNIB employees who run it.

Manageress Laura Almeida said fewer people are coming in now than even during the dispute,

On Tuesday only about five showed up for meals and four others for coffee, all supervisory personnel. Normally about 200 people use the cafeteria.

What's the staff doing this morning?

"We're justing cleaning up the place . . . and looking for better days," Miss Almeida said.

Ken Horodyski, public affairs manager for B.C. Tel on Vancouver Island, said local union officials presented the company with a petition Tuesday asking to have the CNIB cafeteria service replaced.

"We told them we had a contract with CNIB and intended to uphold it," Horodyski said. "They said they would take the matter back to their membership and let us know the results. I am surprised, to say the least, they have made a public issue of it."

Horodyski said the union and company mutually agreed there would be no reprisals once the workers returned to their jobs after the 81-day dispute.

"How far can they take this? Why aren't they boycotting B.C. Hydro for supplying us power, the municipality for the water we received or the service stations for providing us with gas?"

ALMEIDA
. . . little business

Bob Mercer, CNIB's executive director, said today in Vancouver he is baffled by the union action.

He said he met with TWU president Bob Donnelly two or three times over the past six weeks to discuss CNIB's contract with B.C. Tel.

The most recent session was two weeks ago. The matter was left unresolved and Donnelly promised to get back to Mercer at a later date.

"I haven't heard from him since," Mercer said.

"From our side we've always been open for discussion and I thought the union was too. I don't understand what the union is trying to do now."

Donnelly was not available for comment.

Mercer said the catering contract with B.C. Tel is CNIB's biggest in the province. Last year's sales province-wide were more than $800,000. All of the proceeds go towards helping the blind.

"Naturally I'm concerned about what's happened," said Mercer. "We wouldn't want to do anything that would put us in an awkward situation when the contract comes up for renewal (later this spring)."

Tax Assesment Cut

Oak Bay Manor, a privately-owned luxury home for the elderly, won a reduction in its taxable assessment in an appeal to the court of revision Tuesday.

The assessor had placed the manor in the category of residence, making it liable for an assessment of 25 per cent of its market value of $3 million.

A spokesman for the manor argued the building should be considered an apartment and the taxable assessment should be at the apartment rate of 15 per cent of market value.

The court of revision agreed to roll back the assessment level to 15 per cent for 254 of the 272 rooms in the manor.

The other 18 rooms, used for short-term rehabilitation of alcoholics, will be assessed at the full 25 per cent rate.

The court was told the manor is partly like a nursing home and partly a long-term residential hotel, making definition difficult.

A spokesman for the manor said the building is being used only to about 50 per cent of its capacity of 450 people, with 70 permanent guests and 108 personal-care patients.

In addition there are 26 drug or alcohol patients attending courses on a one-month basis. The alcholism centre is operated inside the manor by the provincial ministry of health.

In a separate hearing, the court of revision increased the assessment on Dorchester Apartments, 1370 Beach Drive.

Assessment had been $349,700 for land and $10,900 for improvements, a total of $360,600, but this was increased to $420,625 for land and nil for improvements. Lawyer Ken Murphy, representing Oak Bay, had appealed the original assessment by the provincial assessing authority, arguing it should be higher for both land and building.

The court of revision, after hearing arguments from both sides, reduced the assessement on the buiilding to nil but sharply increased the assessment on the land.

NOON BOOM

An electronically fired cannon that will boom at noon every day is to be set up outside the Laurel Point hotel as part of the Captain Cook Bicentennial festivities.

Ald. Bill Tindall said today Victoria council accepted the offer of a cannon, made by Canadian Freehold Properties Ltd., but only after making sure the noise won'tdisturb residents in the area.

Tindall said the city has been assured that with the cannon pointed north, the sound will travel out across the harbor and won't bother people living in the Laurel Point area.

He said the cannon will stay in service after this year's Captain Cook celebrations, becoming a permanent Victoria fixture.

Smith Near Pact

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Black and white Rhodesian leaders today announced they had reached agreement in principle on the major points of a constitutional settlement and were within days of setting up a transitional government designed to lead the country to black majority rule.

Premier Ian Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Chief Jeremiah Chirau and Elliott Gabellah, who was representing Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, told reporters after the 37th round of the so-called internal settlement talks that they had solved their differences over the key issue of white representation in a Zimbabwe parliament.

All four walked together, smiling and chatting, out of a red-brick suburban mansion where the talks have been taking place to give the news to reporters.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the state department said the agreement appeared unacceptable to the United States because it was made without the participation of the guerrilla group.

U.S. Coal Strike Talks Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract talks in the 72-day U.S. coal strike will begin at the White House tonight after industry officials at first refused, then accepted President Carter's call to reconvene the negotiations.

The industry's acceptance came hours after company negotiators had rejected Carter's request, made Tuesday. The president also held out the threat of stronger measures to end the strike.

A statement by the Bituminous Coal Operators Association (BCOA) said the decision to attend the White House negotiations was made after the industry was assured of "appropriate conditions" for the resumptions of talks.

FLOWER COUNT time is over and maybe it's just as well, because there are so many crocuses popping up in Beacon Hill Park the job would defy the most dedicated counter. But Pam Knight is one of the residents of this banana belt capital who likes to take in the cheerful sight, as a reminder, perhaps, that spring lies around the corner. (Bill Halkett photo).

Woman Attacked In Drugs Demand

A woman night attendant at a home for the mentally handicapped was attacked and threatened early today by two men in ski masks who demanded money and drugs.

The intruders fled after holding Mrs. Donalda Mills for three quarters of an hour at the Springwood group home, off Mt. Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck and kicked but not seriously injured and returned to complete her shift after a checkup at hospital.

A cashbox containing $15 was stolen after drawers and cupboards were ransacked without disclosing any drugs other than household medication.

Saanich police and North Saanich RCMP set up roadblocks shortly after the woman reported the robbery at 12:15 a.m. but no suspects were found.

Ralph Vipond, administrator of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, which operates the home, said the incident took place without arousing any of the 22 adult residents.

"She (Mrs. Mills) talked them down," he said.

But when the men discovered the box contained only $15 they threw her down and kicked her.

Mrs. Mills, a program worker at the home, said the men were young and not too abusive.

"There could have been a lot of damage done at that place. They were very considerate in that fashion,"she said today.

Police said Mrs. Mills was struck in the face and kicked. The attack left her bruised and bleeding with one eye puffed up and an injury to a wrist and hand.

The residence consists of a main building containing bedrooms, activity area and office. A separate building houses the kitchen and Vipond said it was while the attendant was walking between the two structures that she was seized.

The doors would have been locked had she been inside, he said.

He said the society is considering a burglar alarm system and employing a second person for overnight surveillance.

Vipond said police make one nightly check of the premises.

HUNGRY ELK 'WON'T STARVE'

A spokesman for British Columbia's recreation and conservation ministry gave his guarantee today that hundreds of hungry elk in the East Kootenay area won't starve to death because of a lack of hay.

"Those elk are being fed and they'll continue to be fed," said Walter Donald, assistant to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

Donald said in an interview he didn't known how the fish and wildlife branch would be given the additional funds it needs to carry out its feeding of the elk, but the government would find a way to maintain the program.

Donald made the announcement after Carmen Purdy, president of the East Kootenay Wildlife Association, complained that the elk were starving to death and threatened to dump the first dead elk on the steps of the legislature to bring attention to the problem.

Military Colleges Admit Women

Women are to be admitted to Canada's three military colleges.

Defence Minister Barney Danson announced the plan Tuesday and said the first step will be to appoint women to the advisory board of Royal Roads Military College here in Victoria, the Royal Military College in Kingston, Ont., and St. Jean College de Militaire in St. Jean, Que.

Col. J.H. Roddick, commandant of Royal Roads, said the addition of women will not pose any serious problems.

He said when U.S. military academies first admitted women they tried to segregate them by placing them in separate wings of dormitories. This has since been changed, he said, and women now have their own rooms and washrooms scattered throughout the various dormitories.

"The pysical fitness program might have to be adjusted. There may have to be some acceptable alternatives," he said.

Rear-Admiral R.W. Murdoch (Rtd.) is regional chairman of the Royal Roads sub-committee on the advisory board.

Murdoch said the minister indicated he will appoint women to the board quickly.

"The move is in tune with the times. He (the minister) will be looking for well-qualified women in the academic and professional fields."

Murdoch said the United States has had women in its military academies for the past two years.

Canadian women officers to date have received academic training in civilian colleges through the Regular Officers Training Program.

While more and more job categories are being made available to women in the armed forces they are not eligible to serve in a combat role.

Murdoch said this is not so much a defence department edict as a society decision.

At the present time women officers may serve as engineers, except aboard ships.

They may also serve as logistic officers, doctors and dentists and other roles connected with the two professions, security officers, personnel support officers and in the field of personnel development, which includes chaplains, social welfare officers and other appointments.

LEVESQUE STALKS OUT

Premiers Clash Over Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Government leaders clashed on the controversial issues of housing and transportation policy today as they struggled to come up with specific proposals to help the economy.

As the three-day economic conference drew to a close, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque stalked out ahead of schedule, dismissing the meeting as "essentially a pre-election extravaganza" staged by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Levesque earlier accused the government of bungling housing grants to the provinces. And premiers from both east and west attacked the so-called user-pay formula for transportation payments advocated by Transport Minister Otto Lang. (See other stories on the conference on page 12).

However, the first ministers seem eager to wrap up their economic summit conference with at least one showcase agreement on a project or plan to stimulate the economy and create jobs quickly.

Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, who is pushing big energy projects, told reporters the conference should come up with a project of the "lighthouse variety" to lead the way.

A new venture such as developing a heavy oil plant in the West or going ahead with East Coast Fundy tidal power would serve the bill and help out some of the nearly one million unemployed.

Nova Scotia Premier Gerald Regan said "we will have made real progress if we come up with even one major project."

They would provide mainly temporary jobs and not cure unemployment once and for all, he said, and it would put a strain on capital markets to the expense of other policy areas.

"The siren song of a series of massive projects and immediate jobs may be politically sexy," Bennett added, "but it is not the whole answer. There has to be balance in our approach."

HUBBARD ORDERED JAILED

PARIS (AFP) — Ron Hubbard, American founder of the Church of Scientology, has been sentenced to four years imprisonment and fined 35,000 francs ($7,000) for fraudulently obtaining funds.

A judge ruled that the church obtained money under false pretences claiming to be a charity when it was really "a strong, well-run commercial enterprise."

The judge issued a warrant for the arrest of Hubbard who is reported to live aboard a luxury yacht in the Atlantic ocean.

Hubbard was tried in his absence.

PM BLOWS UP AT LEVESQUE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lost his temper during closed discussions with Quebec Premier Rene Levesque on the federal system of housing grants, and on dairy policy, provincial sources said today.

Their dispute, which erupted at a dinner meeting Tuesday night of Trudeau and the 10 premiers, blew up again today at the federal-provincial economic conference.

Levesque told the meeting that Quebec lost $64 million in federal housing grants last year because of Ouellet's rigid approach and bureaucratic red tape.

Ouellet retorted that Quebec lost out on the funds because the Quebec Housing Corp., a Crown agency, "is a white elephant that moves at a turtle's pace."

The premier said Ouellet's tone likely "has a foretaste of speeches we will hear in coming months" — a reference to an expected federal election this year.

Following the dinner at Trudeau's home, Levesque said it appeared the federal government was staging the conference largely for electioneering purposes.

It appeared the premiers wanted to keep a tight lid on the fact that the dispute had occurred.

B.C. Oil Find A Bonanza

A significant oil discovery near Fort St. John could increase B.C.'s crude oil production by 10 per cent before the end of 1979, a spokesman for Home Oil Ltd. of Calgary said today.

The company said its subsidiary, Scurry-Rainbow, is developing an oil find that could produce 4,000 barrels of crude oil a day.

At the present level of development, it is producing 1,000 barrels per day. The crude is being trucked to the Trans Mountain pipeline for delivery to refineries in the Vancouver area.

The discovery has created excitement among major oil companies who bid a record $57 million at the winter sale of oil land rights in the area.

The discovery at Eagle, 40 kilometres north of Fort St. John, was made in October, 1976.

But because of government regulations regarding disclosure, no announcement could be made for one year. In October, 1977, the company announced it had discovered oil but no one outside government and industry circles sought details.

"There was too much excitement about big discoveries in Alberta," said Ian Doig, manager of corporate affairs for Home Oil Ltd.

"In a quieter time there would have been a lot of publicity about something like this."

He said people became interested when major oil companies started bidding for land this winter.

"Yesterday and today the phone has just kept ringing," he said.

B.C.'s crude oil resources had been declining until the Scurry-Rainbow discovery.

The company has 13 wells already in place and plans many more. Within 18 months it expects production to be up to 4,000 barrels per day, which might be the upper limit of the present find.

However, the company plans a vigorous exploration program in hopes of finding additional oil.

He said chances are strong for additional discoveries both by Scurry-Rainbow and other exploration firms.

CANCER TEAM GETS CASH

A provincial government cut of $1.3 million in the Cancer Control Agency budget has been restored.

Jim Gilmore, spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association, said Health Minister Bob McClelland had ordered the CCA to cut 10 per cent of its budget several months ago.

Gilmore said the CCA made representation to the minister last November, resulting in the cut being rescinded this week.

Dollar Takes Beating

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar took a heavy beating on the New York money markets Tuesday, closing at a three-month low of $89.75 U.S. cents in hectic trading.

The dollar opened at 90.07 U.S. cents and steadily lost ground throughout the day, dropping by more than a third of a cent by closing time.

A currency trader for the Bank of Montreal attributed the fall to medium-sized commercial selling of the Canadian dollar by investment houses.

He added that rumors some investment houses have revised their predictions on how far the dollar will fall may also be a factor.

"At the root of it all is a continued lack of confidence in the Canadian economy," he said.

February is traditionally a bad month for the dollar because of the number of Canadian tourists spending money abroad.

Last winter, Canadians spent $1 billion abroad while non-Canadian tourists in Canada were spending $192 million.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 1-20 at $0.8980. Pound sterling was down 3-10 at $1.9340.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Plummeting prices in heavyweight issues sent the Toronto stock market down more than four points Wednesday in active mid-afternoon trading.

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. slumped 2⅜ to $10⅝ a share on the sale of 33,643 shares following its resumption about 12:30 p.m. after the company announced the omission of the current quarter's dividend. The statement said a loss of about $38 million is expected for the period.

Four Seasons Hotels Ltd. rose 80 cents to $5.50 a share on the sale of 1,500 shares after resuming at the opening, while the trading halt continued in shares of Bridger Petroleum Ltd., last at $11.75 a share.

Na-Churs International Ltd., halted at the opening, has announced that "certain favorable corporate developments" will be disclosed Thursday. It last traded at $7⅝ a share.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost more ground at New York, with the Dow Jones industrial average groping for support at its lowest levels in nearly three years.

Coal industry officials rejected President Carter's call for an immediate resumption of negotiations between the industry and the United Mine Workers.

Just before noon, when the Dow was down about five points, they reversed their position and agreed to take part in talks at the White House. The resumption of negotiations was slated for 8 p.m. EST.

London

LONDON (CP) — Continued reaction to the January current account deficit sent prices sharply lower near the close of moderate trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index dropped 7.5 to 452.2 an hour before the close. Leading industrials recorded heavy declines, while oil stocks dropped and gold issues climbed with higher bullion prices. Canadian stocks were steady to fractionally lower.
